Girl Jails Man After 2-Mile Chase

HER PAINTINGS MAY PAY HOTEL BILL

SPANISH BARONESS SUED

Marguerite de Alcahali, Baroness de Solodat, has been sued by Hotel Brunswick for $1,225.03 for board, room and a salon in which she showed her 38 paintings valued at $80,000. A lien is claimed on the pictures to apply on the hotel bills.

GIRL KILLED IN DORCHESTER

An unidentified girl was instantly killed in Codman square, Dorchester, today, when the operator of a truck lost control of his machine and it raced down Codman Hill and then crossed the sidewalk in Codman square, pinning the child to the ground. The driver of the truck is being held at the Mattapan police station.

WOMAN BOOKKEEPER ACCUSED

Miss Cora L. Cudworth, 54, for many years bookkeeper for Alfred M. Davenport, florist, Watertown, was held in $2,500 bonds in Waltham Court today on complaints charging larceny of $400 and forgery.

BACK BAY MISS LOSES TWO TEETH IN BATTLE WITH ACCUSED DRIVER

In a most accommodating fashion, William T. Kelley, twenty-six, of Calumet street, Revere, fled two miles to the Chelsea Police Station and arrest, after he is alleged to have beaten a Back Bay girl he volunteered to take home.

Behind Kelley raced two taxi cabs, the drivers of which had been attracted to the battle in a truck in Front street, Charlestown, when Mildred Gardner, 27, of Haviland street, Back Bay, kicked out the windshield.

Kelley pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Charles E. Sullivan in Charlestown Municipal Court on a charge of assault and battery. The case was continued to next Wednesday for trial and bail was fixed at $2,000.

BATTLE IN TRUCK.

Kelley's frantic dash into the protecting arms of the police made him a prisoner when Miss Gardner, conveyed by the protesting taxi drivers, followed into the station and charged that he had attempted to attack her in the truck cab.

The girl lost two teeth and her lips were badly bruised.

According to her story to the police, she was standing in Tremont street waiting for a taxi to take her home when Kelley drove along and volunteered.

Instead, however, he drove in the opposite direction, she said, but when she remonstrated, he assured her she would be taken home. He turned on her in Front street, Charlestown, however, according to her story, and a wild battle began.

After she had lost two teeth and

MOVE TO REVIVE SLAYER AFTER DEATH

Carson City, Nev., May 21 (United)—An odd aspect arose in the case of Stanko Jukich, who is to die by lethal gas, when it was suggested that science and medical skill may be used to bring the convict to life after he has been pronounced dead by the prison doctor and attending physicians.

Immediately after the body is brought from the death cell to the penitentiary morgue and the examination is made, Jukich will be given over to his cousin who may legally do what he wishes with the body.

Two years ago Dr. Delos A. Turner, an observer for the Army, declared he could resuscitate Gee Jon, a Chinese and the first man to die by gas, by injecting adrenalin into his heart, but prison technicalities prevented the attempt.

It is possible that Turner may be summoned to experiment after the execution of Jukich and it is known that men who use hydrogenic acid gas in commercial work are often knocked unconscious and remain so for several hours, but finally revive without any ill effects.

It is a live topic of discussion in the little town of Carson as to just what Nevada would do after Jukich had been pronounced officially dead and then have him come to life again a free man.

Jukich, sitting alone in the big chair and with the faces of observers crowded about the window in front of him, lights glaring down upon him and the hiss of death gas behind him will pay the official and legal price for the taking of his child sweetheart's life.

The only witnesses will be doctors and newspapermen, unless relatives of Jukich decide to watch the execution.

FEENEY QUITS AS QUIGLEY'S LAWYER

Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley of Chelsea and his brother, Thomas, a member of the Chelsea police department, will have new counsel when the Chelsea rum conspiracy comes up for re-trial on June 8.

John P. Feeney, their attorney at the previous trial and chief of the defense battery, came into the office of the Clerk of Federal District Court today and formally withdrew his appearance for the Quigley brothers.

Feeney declared his withdrawal was consequent upon his inability to appear in Federal Court on the date set for the conspiracy retrial, as it clashed with the dates set in other courts for trials in which he had been previously engaged.

ARREST 3, SHOOT ONE IN RUM CHASE

ROUND-UP IN BROOKLINE

These Brookline officers arrested three in liquor chase after shooting one man, and a fourth was held in court with the others when he went there to furnish bail for two of them.

ROBBERS SLAY MILK DEALER

Worcester, May 21.—Slain, authorities believe, for the several hundred dollars he had collected from customers, J. Leo McCarthy, twenty-seven, a milk dealer, died today at City Hospital a few hours after he was found unconscious with a fractured skull in Bradley street.

McCarthy's truck was discovered parked at the curb about 200 yards from the place where he was found by two men in a passing taxicab. Police believe he may have been beaten, robbed and taken away in another car to be tossed into the street later, as he is said staggered in a daze after the robbery.

He left home early in the evening to make collections from stores, and he also had a roll of money and some checks with him when he started out. His pockets were empty when he was found.

SOVIET FIGHTS FOR SACCO

Moscow, May 21 (A.P.)—The executive of the International Society for Aid of Revolutionaries has wired instructions to all its branches to protest against electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti, who are now awaiting sentence for murder in Massachusetts.

The executive declares the two men have proved their innocence, and that their execution would be "an unheard-of crime."

CONNECTICUT "DRYS" PLAN STATE TICKET

New Haven, Ct., May 21 (A.P.)—Taking time by the forelock the State central committee of the prohibition party has begun circulation in the towns of Connecticut petitions to secure 4,000 signatures needed in case the organization desires to put a State ticket in the field next Fall.

RAT RINGS 3 BELLS; EVEN THE CAT RUNS

Syracuse, N. Y., May 21 (A.P.)—A large rat, yoked with three bells, similar to those used to tie about a kitten's neck, is at large in the basement of the Crouse Building here. It has scared off all of its brother-inhabitants of the cellar, and also the cellar cat.

CANDY KING 'FAVORITE' GAVE JOB TO MAN SHE WED OVER HIS PROTEST

The tears of Lillian Forsaith won over Charles N. Shaw, candy king, in matters of conduct in the candy business, a former employe of the Keswick Candy Company testified today in Superior Court.

Whenever Lillian had an idea in connection with the business, the witness said, she would convey it to Shaw and would get excited and talk loudly. If this did not win her point, she would cry.

"Mr. Shaw always consented to let her have her way," said Frank A. Ferris of Medford, the witness, a former bookkeeper for the company. Ferris also testified that Captain Harold Angell, now the husband of Lillian, was hired by her to work for the company.

Another feature of Ferris' testimony was his declaration that Lillian O. K.'d the expense account of Angell, her sweetheart, although they were regularly paid by Shaw. Ferris said, too, in testifying that

CARROLL AT TUB WHILE GIRL SPLASHED IN WINE

New York, May 21.—Complete details of Earl Carroll's famous champagne bathing party on the stage of the theatre of Washington's Birthday night were revealed in court today by one of those who had some of the liquor at Miss Joyce's hands.

The revelations were made at the theatrical producer's trial for perjury.

The witness who described the scene so intimately to the jury and a jammed courtroom was Arthur F. Irwin, newspaper man. He said that between 4 and 4:30 in the morning, Carroll, as master of ceremonies, brought out Miss Hawley from the wings behind a cloak, the manager holding the cloak. Miss Hawley, apparently, wore but a single garment.

"Behind the cloak," said Mr. Irwin, "she got into the tub. Then Mr. Carroll announced:

"The line forms at the right, gentlemen. Step right up.'"

Fifteen or twenty men did so, said the witness.

The witness said: "You couldn't

COURT HOLDS 4 AFTER RUM CHASE SHOOTING

Admitting his own guilt, one of a trio unsuccessfully to exonerate the others in Brookline district court today, where all four were held on charges of breaking and entering the Hitchcock Drug Company store, No. 999 Beacon street, to steal six cases of prescription whiskey.

Charles G. Lozier, twenty-nine, Louisville, Ky., flying temporarily at the People's Palace, declared he broke in and took the liquor and that the two men arrested with him after a shooting affray in which one was wounded were merely his "customers."

Arrested with Lozier were Joseph Liebenstein, twenty-six, of Warren street, Roxbury, and John E. Rourke, twenty-eight, of Spring Garden street, Dorchester. Lieberstein was shot in the shoulder when Officer Joseph O'Connell and Patrolman Arthur Tiernan opened fire in effecting their capture after a chase.

A fourth man, John Gouner of Gerrish street, South End, was

10,000 MORE AGENTS TO ENFORCE DRY LAW

Washington, May 21 (I.N.S.)—The Treasury today made public an executive order by President Coolidge which will increase the Federal dry enforcement army by approximately 10,000 men.

The order permits the Treasury to enlist at a nominal salary State, county and municipal officers as special dry agents.

It will apply to all States except those having constitutional barriers to the employment of State officers as Federal employes.

The Treasury said the authorization for increasing the number of agents constitutes one of the greatest booms in history to liquor law enforcement. It will enable the Federal government, at small expense, to honeycomb the nation with agents to check the illegal liquor traffic.

The Federal salary paid the State officers probably will be $1 a year, the Treasury said. That would increase the Federal cost of enforcement by only $10,000 a year.

The order, the Treasury said, will not apply to New York, Rhode Island and Maryland, which do not have a State dry enforcement law.

"WET and dry."

The Pennsylvania experiment is only begun. Gifford Pinchot, a man of sincerity and character, was third in the race. The best men often know the least about politics.

But Pinchot, presumably, has not finished. His candidacy killed Pepper, the administration candidate. Running as an independent "dry" Republican, he might beat Vare, the wet Republican. Remember Pinchot got more than 200,000 votes. They would stick. He might send a Democrat to the Senate from Pennsylvania, beating the regular Republican on election day, as he beat the administration man on primary day.

Stranger things can happen, in a political fight about the citizens' right "to do as they please."

HOW WILL Pennsylvania's election affect the 1928 campaign? What will it do to the Volstead law, if anything? Old Congressman will vote cautiously, in spite of any apparent wet victory. They know that if they vote "dry," the wets will forgive them. But if they vote "wet," the drys will never forget or forgive.

To attack a prohibitionist's drink belief is like attacking the faith of a deeply religious man. After that, you are gone.

ON THE OTHER HAND, with Governor Al Smith of New York, an open and very "wet" candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1928, President Coolidge's friends will have to

The [illegible] sentiment, witness said, and added that [illegible] Lillian's [illegible] because the war veteran never worked and never could support her.

"Mr. Shaw," testified Forsyth in answer to questions, "said it was a good piss of work to disbar Angell from the Keswick Co. He said he was absolutely worthless; that he was drawing [illegible] for nothing."

The stenog account turned in by Angell, according to Forsyth, contained items for shoe shines, gasoline and meals, but after Lillian Forsaith and O. K.'d the Shaw declared that he had paid the expenses on that particular [illegible]

Q.—Did Lillian ever make any objection to the change of bookkeeping style inaugurated by the Seven Oils Company? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was done? A.—She usually made the complaints to Mr. Shaw and he told me, generally, to keep to my own style.

Q.—Did she ever make any complaints? A.—Yes.

TEARS WON HIM.

Q.—Give some instances? A.—Well, some advertising men came in with plans, sketches. If they did not meet with her approval she would quickly go to Mr. Shaw and tell him. He usually agreed with her.

Q.—Could you hear what was said? A.—Yes, there was a partition about seven feet high between my office and Mr. Shaw's. I could hear clearly.

Q.—Any other time when Lillian objected to certain plans? A.—Yes. Mr. Shaw had an advertising scheme and had gone to much expense to have it put over.

Q.—What was her method of persuasion? A.—She would get excited, talk loudly and if this didn't work she would cry.

Q.—What effect would the crying have? A.—Mr. Shaw always consented to let her have her way.

Q.—Was Angell employed by the Keswick company when you went there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who employed him? A.—Lillian.

Q.—Did Mr. Shaw ever say anything to you about Angell? A.—Yes. He told me that Angell was worthless, was no good to the company and that he was getting paid for nothing and should be discharged.

SHAW SAID HE PAID.

Q.—Was there any episode pertaining to an expense account of Angell? A.—Yes; Mr. Shaw asked me on time what Angell's expenses were on a trip to Worcester. I told him about items he had put in, including gasoline, shoe shine and meals. Mr. Shaw told me that he was with Angell on that trip and that he paid all the expenses.

Q.—Was this money ever paid to Angell? A.—Yes. Miss Forsaith O. K.'d the bill and paid the money by check.

Q.—Did you ever say anything to Mr. Shaw about Angell? A.—Yes. He asked me to state my opinion of Angell and I told him I believed that Angell was trying to "put the hooks into him."

Q.—What did Mr. Shaw say in regard to that? A.—He said he agreed with me. He said he would like to get rid of Angell, but that he didn't know how to do it.

Q.—Did Mr. Shaw ever say anything to you about Lillian's marriage? A.—Yes, he told me he was opposed to Lillian's marriage because Angell never worked and would never support her.

Q.—What did Mr. Shaw say to you, if anything, about Lillian's discharge from the candy company? A.—He said it was a good thing for the company.

Q.—Did he ever say anything to you about being through with Lillian and Harold? A.—He told me that after she was married he would never bother with her any more.

Q.—What did Shaw say to you, if anything, about Mr. Angell before he (Angell went to work for the Keswick company? A.—He noticed that Angell was paying great attention to Lillian.

Upon objection of Attorney Samuel Hoar, that answer was stricken from the record and the witness said, "He told me that Angell should not be allowed around the factory and that he had no business there."

Q.—Do you know from what Mr. Shaw said, if he attended the wedding of Miss Forsyth and Harold? A.—He told me that he did not go to the wedding.

HIS MENTAL CONDITION

Q.—At some time or other did Angell say anything to you about Mr. Shaw's mental condition? Objection was made to the question and judge Whiting ruled it out.

Q.—When you finished work for Mr. Shaw in 1919, was he able to understand business problems readily? Objection was made and Attorney Murchie then asked:

Q.—Did you notice any difference in the mental condition from the first time you went to work for him and the last time you saw him? A.—Yes.

Q.—What difference? A.—When I first went there he seemed to grasp things in general, office details and so forth. Toward the latter part of my employment, he did not seem to grasp things. There appeared a blank look on his face at times. If he did make a reply to a question, it was irresponsive.

Q.—Any instance of an answer which was not responsive? A.—Yes. I remember one time when a man was promoted at the Seven Oils Office. I went in to see Mr. Shaw and told him that $30,000 or $40,000 was misappropriated by Mr. Clark. I thought he was paying attention to me, but out of a clear sky, he took a picture from his desk; it was worth two or thre dollars, and he said, "What do you think of that?"

Q.—Sometime after the wedding of Miss Forsaith and Harold, did you see her come into the office and speak to him? A.—I don't think so.

HIS PET NAME FOR HER.

Q.—Before the annual meeting of the Keswick Company in February, 1922, did Mr. Shaw say anything about reinstating Lillian? A.—Yes, he said he thought that she would probably do better and that it ought to be done for the little girl.

Q.—Is that what he called her, "little girl"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he say that she had learned a lesson? A.—Yes. He said he thought she learned a lesson and that she would do better.

The witness was questioned about the annual meeting and as to whether Mr. Goodwin had "words" with Mr. Lichtihge. He testified that both men were excited.

COAST GUARDS HELPLESS TO AID RESCUES

While yachtsmen were decrying the helpless condition of the U. S. coast guard station in the inner harbor off City Point, two boys, one the son of a South Boston judge, were saved from drowning by volunteers.

William Day, thirteen, son of Associate Justice William J. Day, of Columbia road, South Boston, and a playmate, James Dooley, of East Sixth street, South Boston, were plunged into the waters of Dorchester Bay when a small home-made boat capsized.

MOTHER SEES RESCUE.

The accident occurred off the Boston Yacht Club. Mrs. Day saw the boys struggling in the water, William Houderoft, a boatman of the yacht club, and Frank C. Nolfo of No. 915 East Fourth street, South Boston, put out to the rescue, Mrs. Day, mother of the Day boy, witnessed the rescue from the shore.

An improvised sail on the boys' boat carried it out 200 feet from shore, and when they attempted to remove the sail the boat overturned. According to Nolfo, a coastguard arrived in a rowboat ten minutes after the rescue.

There is only one rowboat available for accidents at the coast guard station. Two years ago before the station became a headquarters for rum chasers, the station was equipped by two speed boats and a tug.

The station was returned as a life saving base after a long fight carried on in Washington by yachtsmen and residents of South Boston and Dorchester.

The station is manned by 11 men with Chief Boatswains Mate F. B. Holbrook in charge. Although hampered by the rum chasing activities Holbrook and his men last year saved more than 16 lives.

Yachtsmen claim that there is more than $3,000,000 worth of yachts and watercraft within a mile of the station and at the present time the men at the station are helpless to save either life or property.

WHITTEMORE'S TRIAL CLOSING

Baltimore, May 21 (I.N.S.).—Richard Reese ("Candy Kid") Whittemore, credited by the police with crimes which netted the "Whittemore Mob" of New York more than a million dollars in loot, may know by nightfall whether he has again "beaten the rope."

With the testimony completed in his trial for killing John Holtman, sixty-year-old prison guard, final arguments were begun today before Judge O'Dunne—the State standing the extreme penalty, the defense contending that Whittemore killed Holtman in self-defense.

EARL CARROLL ESCORTED GIRL TO 'WINE' TUB

see any more of Miss Hawley when she was in the tub than from a little below the shoulders up." She was in the tub five or ten minutes only, he added.

The questions were put to the witness by Assistant United States Attorney John M. Harlan over repeated objections from Herbert Smyth, Carroll's chief counsel.

The testimony is in flat contradiction of Carroll's testimony before the February and March grand juries, when he said that neither Miss Hawley nor anyone else was in the tub and because of which he is now accused of perjury.

Before Miss Hawley appeared and climbed into the tub it had been on the right of the stage, and, according to Mr. Irwin, filled with champagne served in a cup. He said he had a cup of the liquor.

"What time was it, Mr. Irwin," asked M. Harlan, "when you drank from the cup?"

EARL WAS NEAR TUB.

"At about 12:30 a. m.," he said.

Q.—Was anyone in the tub when you drank from it? A.—There was not.

Q.—Did you get any other intoxicating liquors at this party? (This was objected to by Mr. Smyth.)

Q.—Did you see Earl Carroll at this party? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you see him at the tub? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see him take any drinks from the tub? A.—I did not.

Mr. Harlan then returned in a roundabout way to the question about Irwin's getting any other liquor at the party and the witness said he was given some byl a man named Lubin.

"You remember yesterday, Mr. Irwin," the prosecutor went on, "you testified that the tub was at one side of the stage and that at about 4 or 4:30 in the morning it was brought to the center?"

"Yes." Irwin said.

IN CENTER OF STAGE.

Q.—Did anyone get into the tub? A.—Yes.

Q.—What it a man or a woman? A.—A woman.

Q.—Did you know her name? A.—I know it now.

Q.—What was her name? A.—Joyce Hawley.

Q.—Was Earl Carroll there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where were you? A.—In about the center of the auditorium.

Q.—Please state the circumstances of how Miss Hawley got into the tub.

Over Mr. Smyth's objections Mr. Irwin then said:

"The tub was moved to the centre of the stage and a chair was put in front of the tub and a girl came out of the wings to the chair. Some one was carrying a cloak in front of her and behind the cloak she took off a garment and bot into the tub.

Q.—Who held the cloak? A.—Mr. Carroll.

Q.—Are you sure? A.—Yes.

Witness then told of the line that "formed on the right" and scooped up drinks from the contents of the tub.

This completed the direct examination and witness was subjected to cross questioning.

WITNESS IS GRILLED.

Q.—Were you invited to this party? A.—Well Mr. Carroll told me that he was giving a little private party and asked me if I wouldn't come.

Q.—You consider yourself a gentleman, don't you? A.—Yes I do. I consider myself a gentleman for telling the truth.

Q.—Have you been to other parties where liquor was served? A.—Yes, several.

Q.—Could you give me the names of your host or hostess? A.—I don't remember them.

—What did you have to drink at these parties? A.—Champagne, highballs, cocktails.

Q.—What kind of cocktails? A.—Martinis.

—What else? A.Alexandere.

Q.—My, that sounds like a voice from the past—they have whites of eggs in them, don't they? A.—Yes, I believe they do.

District Attorney Buckner here objected to this line of questioning and the court admonished Attorney Smyth, defence counsel, to stop.

GIRL'S FATE DECIDED BY COURT

After long controversy in the Massachusetts Supreme Court, custody of eight-year-old Adelaide was granted today to Mr. and Mrs. William S. St. Martin of Taunton, her foster parents, who brought a writ of habeas corpus to get her back from St. Mary's Infant Asylum, Dorchester.

She will henceforth be known as Adelaide St. Martin, by order of the court. Her real mother is Mrs. Catherine Hurley of Boston. The case reached the Supreme Court as a result of action by an agent of St. Mary's who, it was admitted, "kidnaped" the child from school in Taunton.

As an infant, Adelaide was given to St. Mary's by Mrs. Hurley and later the mother agreed to her adoption by Mrs. Grace F. Rancourt, and Adelaide Hurley became Adelaide Rancourt. Mrs. Rancourt died and the St. Martins adopted the child in the courts of Bristol County.

The Supreme Court decided the adoption was legal and binding. At a previous hearing Henry V. Cunningham, representing the asylum, said there was no objection to the St. Martins having Adelaide if they would put in writing a word-of-mouth agreement to rear the child as a Catholic. No mention of religion was made in the decision.

HUNT D'MAR FLEETNESS SECRET

The advantages, if any, of an athlete's training and his possibly greater physical defense are the basis of interesting experiments which four doctors at the Massachusetts General Hospital medical laboratory are performing on Clarence DeMar, marathon runner.

Contrary to De Mar's penchant, he rides a stationary bicycle for half an hour in the early morning in the hospital research laboratory and, while his nose is "clipped" and his mouth covered with rubber apparatus, he inhales and exhales as his pedalling feet register his heart and blood reactions.

In his working clothes the Melrose runner goes through the medical stunts. He sits, stands and lies and continues the respiratory and circulatory tests on the intricately arranged bicycle which will later make for comparisons to distinguish what superiority training affords the circulatory system of an athlete.

In De Mar's case it is particularly desired to know where he gets his extraordinary ability for running. The tests have been on for a few days and will continue for a week. De Mar, it is assumed by the doctors, is in the "pink" of condition. He doesn't diet or take added rest.

Drs. A. V. Bock, J. S. Lawrence, D. M. Hurxthal and D. B. Dill are making the tests.

Complete information has already been ascertained on two ordinary men, not athletes. Dr. Bock, who was one of them, today said that his reactions in some instances were the same as De Mar's.

Commenting on the experiments, Dr. J. H. Means of the hospital explained the idea of the discovery was to ascertain how much blood the heart has to pump a minute during performances of various amounts of muscular work, and during periods of rest. The use of De Mar was to provide the necessary comparison between ordinary and extraordinary individuals—athletes and non-athletes.

CAN'T WIN BACK WIFE, ENDS LIFE

Canaan, N. H., May 21.—Weighted down with a stone fastened about his waist with a rope, the body of Dudley Swain, 40, of Enfield, was found today in a deep pool of the Mascoma River near West Canaan.

His death was declared a suicide by the medical referee. Swain has been missing since April 30 after having tried in vain, the authorities said, to effect a reconciliation with his wife, Mary, now living in Concord.

HARVARD OPENS NEW METALLURGY COURSE

Discarding its four-year undergraduate course in metallurgy, Harvard University will inaugurate a post-graduate course starting with the opening of college in September.

It has been demonstrated, college officials say, that as fundamental knowledge of mathematics, chemistry, physics and mineralogy obtained by students in a majority of the colleges and universities, the need of Harvard continuing its four-year undergraduate instruction in metallurgy, no longer obtains.

The post-graduate course will consist of a one-year program of intensive study and will lead to a degree of Master of Science and after a two-year intensive course to a degree of Metallurgical Engineer.

FARM RELIEF BILLS IN SHAPE FOR PASSAGE

Washington, May 21 (A.P.).—All three of the farm relief bills with which the House has been wrestling were finally in position today for passage, but leaders doubted whether they would be disposed of before tomorrow or even later. Reading of the Haugen price stabilization bill for amendment was completed yesterday and the Tincher credit measure and Curtis-Aswell commodity marketing proposal immediately were offered as substitutes. Representative Aswell (D.), Louisiana, announced just before adjournment he would offer an amendment to the bill of which he is co-author, to authorize appropriation of $140,000,000 for farm loans. The Tincher measure carries $100,000,000. It is believed the Aswell amendment will receive Tincher support.

POLES SEIZE GEN. HALLER

London, May 21 (I.N.S.).—General Haller, leader of the Polish forces antagonistic to Marshal Pilsudski, was arrested today by order of Pilsudski, according to a Central News dispatch from Warsaw.

General Haller is identified with the movement from centering at Posen which has been trying to establish an assembly independent of the national assembly at Warsaw.

With this announcement the last obstacle to a tranquil regime for Marshal Pilsudski is removed. Supported by the Posen group, or at least not violently opposed by it, Pilsudski and the government which will be established by the national assembly, will be able to work unhindered.

SEEK WOMAN WHO TOOK SON

A default warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Alamandine Fazar of Dudley street, Roxbury, was issued today by Judge Flynn in Superior Court at East Cambridge when Mrs. Fazar failed to appear in court, as ordered, and to produce the son she is alleged to have kidnaped from a home where the Children's Aid Society placed him.

Fear for the safety of the child's mother was expressed at her home. Relatives said she has been unable to eat or sleep, worrying about the case, and her mother, Mrs. Philippine Pond, declared she thought she left home to go to court. She was unable to say where she might have gone.

Mrs. Fazar, who is seventy-eight and a divorcee, is said to have been despondent and to have threatened to commit suicide.

Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris and primate of France, and Cardinal Von Faulhaber, archbishop of Munich, Germany, will be among the speakers the day prior to the main section of the congress.

FILM SPREADS SUNSHINE AMONG ORPHANS

SMILES THAT RADIATE HAPPINESS
These two boys express for 418 others at the House of the Angel Guardian, Jamaica Plain, their joy at seeing "That's My Baby" through the arrangements of the Boston Evening American.

"HUMDINGER," I SAY
It was a day of days for the boys and they left no doubts as to whether they enjoyed the film.

MOVIE CHEERS 420 BOYS IN HOME

"A splendid idea" was the manner in which Brother Superior Alman of the House of the Angel Guardian, Jamaica Plain, characterized the plan of th Boston Evening American to give the children in the various institutions of Greater Boston feature motion pictures.

"The 420 boys who live at this institution seldom get a chance to see a feature picture such as 'That's My Baby,' and they naturally are much interested when they get such a chance. They will talk about this picture for many days. It is a great treat to them."

BROTHERS VIEW FILM.

All activities at the institution stopped while the boys viewed the film. Their laughter and exclamations clearly proved they believed the comedy movie was a "humdinger." Many of the thirty-one Brothers of Charity who teach at the institution witnessed the film and enjoyed it quite as much as did the youngsters. Among those who saw the picture was Brother Alman, who is the Brother Superior of this wonderful home, where most of the residents are orphans or half-orphans.

To make possible this fine entertainment for the boys the management of the Metropolitan Theatre had apparatus weighing 500 pounds transported to the Jamaica Plain institution. It took several hours to get this temporary apparatus in position for the event.

RESPONSIVE AUDIENCE.

Through courtesy of the management of the Metropolitan Theatre, where the film will be shown all next week, "That's My Baby" was shown again today at St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, No. 53 Camden street, South End, to another enthusiastic audience.

It will be shown Monday at the Working Boys' Home, Newton Highlands, and on Tuesday at the Home for Destitute Catholic Children in Harrison avenue. On Wednesday the crippled persons being cared for at Massachusetts Hospital School, Canton, will have the pleasure of viewing the picture and on Thursday those who live at the House of the Good Samaritan, Binney street, Roxbury, will be favored. The children who reside at Home for Jewish Children, Dorchester, will see it on Friday of next week.

All the necessary apparatus, as well as the persons who aid in presenting the film, are conveyed to their destinations in a classy Flint sedan through courtesy of General Manager T. L. Bailey and Manager William R. Broderick of the Boston Flint Company. Both men are vitally interested in the welfare of children in the various Greater Boston institutions.

SENECA CAPTAIN SAYS PASSENGERS WERE DRUNK

New York, May 21 (A.P.).—Captain R. W. Leek of the Clyde Liner Seneca, which docked today after repairs to a leak which necessitated removal of passengers off Miami Sunday night, reiterated his denial of charges of seventeen passengers that part of the crew was drunk. Captain Leek said the only intoxicated persons aboard were passengers, and he believed these persons had been mistaken for members of the crew. He said of eight passengers who were intoxicated one man had to be put in irons and another had to be restrained by the crew after tearing a life preserver from a woman.

3 INDICTED IN $251,000 AUTO, RADIO MAIL FRAUD

New York, May 21 (A.P.).—De Witt Van Kouren of New Rochelle, president of an auto accessory and radio company bearing his name, today was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury for using the mails to defraud. He surrendered and was released in $6,000. Indicted with him are William G. Maier, secretary of the company, and Jerome J. Rafferty of the Newark Athletic Club. The company is charged with having enticed 120 firms and individuals of $251,000 through extension of credit on false representations.

Don't Shield Bab From Sun! It's Good for Him!

Atlantic City, N. J., May 21 (A.P.).—Shielding of children's skins against the sun is a "crime against nature," in the opinion of Dr. I. N. Harris, Toronto surgeon, attending the American Health Congress here.

Dr. F. Tisdall, also of Toronto, says mothers should expose their babies to the sun until they are "tanned as brown as bears."

It is the ultra-violet rays in the sunlight that are beneficial, say the doctors. They add to the phosphorous content of the blood and increase the power of the blood to kill bacteria.

ATOMS RUNNING AROUND LOOSE IN KANSAS

Lawrence, Kan., May 21 (A.P.).—Single atoms rattled about in space in a laboratory at the University of Kansas tonight. Not only did these atoms make a noise audible to observers in the laboratory but the sound was caught by the university's radio station KFKU and broadcast throughout the Central West, together with an explanation talk by Dr. H. F. Cady, assisted by John Strong, both of the department of chemistry.

The smallness of the toms used—those from radio-active substance—was explained by Dr. Cady, who said if a single crystal of sugar were divided into a billion parts and this billionth were again divided into a billion parts, the fraction would still be twenty times as large as the atom of helium used.

A leyden jar was the basis of the experiment. The negative pole of the jar was connected with a fine point, taking machine needle, and like a lightning rod in the centre of the jar. Suspended so as to surround the positive point was a brass cylinder, connected with the positive pole. When the jar was charged, the electricity passed across the intervening space between the cylinder and the point until the difference in potential was reduced to 4,000 Then the resistance of the air stopped the discharge, until a radio active substance was brought within a few inches of the upper opening of the brass cylinder and just above the talking machine needle.

When the alpha particles from the radium entered the cylinder they produced ions from the air, and these multiplied by collision until the electric current could pass again. By means of a three stage amplifier this current, which was multiplied between 10,000,000 and 100,000,000 times within the leyden jar, was multiplied 70,000 times, and this power produced in a loud speaker a tone like that of a small bell struck sharply and then muted, or of a plucked violin string.

GARY HITS AT 'OUTRAGEOUS' WAGES

New York, May 21 (I.N.S.).—Business conditions in the United States are as good as they ever have been—perhaps better—capital and labor are in harmony and prospects for continued prosperity are excellent, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Company, said today at the annual meeting of the American Iron & Steel Institute.

Gary said the United States "is at peace with all nations of the globe and this is likely to continue."

He declared labor is being well treated in this country and is appreciated.

"Wages," he added, "are as a rule fair and reasonable, though in certain lines outrageously high. The law of supply and demand will soon or or later bring these matters to a just and proper regulation.

Labor conditions "are generally peaceful and quiet," he said.

"The attitude of the present labor leaders, so-called, is much better than it has been for the larger part of the time during the last twenty-five years. The intention and effort of employers toward employes are considerate and just. The same can be said of employes toward employers.

"Money is plentiful, the per capita circulation is very large, interest rates are low, and every responsible applicant finds no difficulty in obtaining funds for legitimate enterprise.

"The governmental administration, disposition of Congress and attitude of public officials are better than they were in past periods and are to be commended."

Gary said that from the crop outlook, this country may now expect a net total result that will demonstrate more conclusively than ever how rich the country really is.

Old Dobbin Still Shares Road With Autos In Capital

Washington, May 21 (A.P.).—The picturesque horse-drawn carriage and its smartly attired coachman in high silk hat will continue to be seen on the main thoroughfares of Washington, where it is still regarded by some as a fashionable mode of transportation.

The recent controversy over the right to drive horse-drawn vehicles on certain "boulevard highways" was decided by Police Judge John P. McMahon in favor of the slow, stately equipage.

Traffic Chief Eldridge insists, however, that he will keep the hoses and carriage out of the business district.

NEW CHICKENS AT WELLESLEY

As part of the sociological course at Wellesley College, girls interested in the science of raising hens and ducks are buying eggs and feeding them to the incubator where they watch keenly growth and development.

Results of such efforts have netted the girls a chicken and duck, by name, "Pyramus" and "Thisbe," each a week old so named, the girls say, to distinguish them as collegiate poultry.

Grace Dickinson, Marion Lewis, Gladys McCook and Kathleen M. Leavitt are eager students of the science.

FIND MACHINE GUN ON BOAT; 5 ARRESTED

New York, May 21 (A.P.).—Six marine police who overtook a motor boat off Coney Island today found a machine gun and 500 rounds of ammunition aboard with five men who were arrested.

The prisoners said they had been hired by a man named Goldberg whose address they did not know to test the engine, and that they knew nothing of the machine gun.

All are charged with disorderly conduct. They described themselves as Julius Magyar of Perth Amboy, John Ryan of Elizabeth, Harry Smith of Elizabethport, Joseph Moore of New York, and Walter Gerlin of Newark, N. J.

POLICE ROUTE SNAKE DANCE

Several hundred "snake dancers" who said they were from the Mechanics Arts High School, were forced to call off their act on Washington street as theatre crowds were homeward bound, when patrolmen from the Milk street station frowned upon the show.

Little attention was paid the students as they paraded down Boylston street to Washington but as they began to block traffic the police acted. At Dock square the students dispersed quickly when ordered to by the police. One of them said the exhibition was over nothing in particular and that they had attended a dinner previously.

ANALYZE CANDY EATEN BY EVANGELIST

Los Angeles, May 21 (A.P.).—The result of a chemical analysis of candy which Aimee Semple McPherson, widely known evangelist is said to have eaten shortly before she disappeared while surf bathing at Ocean Park Tuesday afternoon is awaited here today. Police developed this phase of the investigation yesterday after following numerous theories, including the possible kidnapine of the evangelist by an underworld character who, officers said, took exceptions to Mrs. McPherson's views on dance hall operations.

SUSPECT POISON.

Acting upon the possibility that the sweets may have contained some harmful element which would have rendered the evangelist helpless in the water, police ordered the analysis.

Miss Finley, a member of Mrs. McPherson's congregation at Angelus Temple, said that while on Ocean Park Pier Tuesday she saw a woman swimming, splashing around in the water and apparently enjoying herself. Miss Finley remarked to a friend that the swimmer must have nerve to be out so far alone.

DISAPPEARS IN WATER.

After watching the woman swim farther out, Miss Finley and her companion took their eyes off her. Shortly later they heard a cry which passed unnoticed at the time, thinking it came from children along the beach. When they looked toward the spot where they had last seen the swimmer she had disappeared.

Later they met Miss Emma Schaffer, Miss McPherson's secretary, and were told the evangelist had drowned. While the search for Mrs. McPherson's body continued, Mrs. Minnie Kenney, mother of the church leader, took occasion to scout reports and rumors that have sprung up since the disappearance of her daughter.

She also denied Angelus Temple was in financial difficulties or that Mrs. McPherson carried large sums of life insurance.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Garden Circus for June 5 Is Scheduled to Be Given on Estate of J. Randolph Coolidge

A QUARTETTE OF SMART matrons, Mesdames Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., Barklie McKee Henry, George S. West and Gaspar G. Bacon, is arranging the Garden Circus at the J. Randolph Coolidge estate in Chestnut Hill for Saturday, June 5, which is to be the annual outdoor jollification for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

IT'S DESIGNED, of course, to ease the Society's way financially, and also to give youngsters of all ages and sizes a gala time from early morn to dewy eve, so to speak. Original and diversified are the attractions.

STUNTS, MERRY and amusing, will be arranged by Miss Janet Greene; Miss Harriet and Miss Caroline Saltonstall, direct the gathering and preparing of good things to eat, without which no affair for children could hope to be a success.

THERE'S TO BE an animal show, with the pets, cherished by youthful owners, on exhibition to aid the good cause of helping little children. Miss Jean Patten and Miss Nancy Patten are in charge.

MISS ELSIE de NORMANDIE is enrolled to supervise a number of young girl aids who'll make themselves generally useful at the Circus, and Miss Anita Potts marshals the smaller feminines working heart and soul for the fete.

THE J. RANDOLPH COOLIDGE estate and its many acres of field and garden, often the scene of charitable affairs, is exactly suited to the Society's circus. And with the charming Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., in the lead, there's much promise for financial success.

THE STEAMSHIP PARIS, giant of the French line, brings back to home shores a number of Boston notables, among them Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears of Arlington street and Mrs. George Peabody Gardner of Beacon street.

MISS ELLA deT. SNELLING
Charming member of the smart young set whose name graces the usher list for this evening's concert and reception, of political flavor, at the Copley-Plaza.
Photograph by Bachrach

MRS. JOHN SILSBEE LAWRENCE and Miss Eloise Lawrence, the latter abandoning her plans for presentation at Court, came in on the Paris; likewise G. T. Nightingale, a traveling companion of Dudley Pickman on a recent voyage.

BACK FROM A WINTER on the French Riviera, Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff, Washingtonian, came in on the Paris to go to her Summer place, "The Ship," down at Osterville on the Cape. Mr. and Mrs. William Hollingsworth came back via the Paris, also Mrs. Harvey Gibson.

GUYOT, AUTOMOBILE racer of international fame, was a passenger; also Mrs. William Goadby Loew and her daughter, distinguished Summer residents of Newport, and the much paragraphed Countess Rossy d'Saica, with the Count.

SPEAKING OF NEWPORT, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr. (Mrs. Church's popularity in Boston grows with leaps and bounds), are planning a Western trip before establishing their menage at Newport for the Summer.

NEWPORT IS INTERESTED in Miss Carlotta Havemeyer's marriage, on June 12, to Anson Alexander Bigelow. The bride-elect, cousin of the Cameron McRae Winslow daughters (Mrs. Winslow was a Havemeyer), is a well-known Newporter of the younger set.

THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden, social lions in Newport as elsewhere during their very brief stays, are to be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James at "Hexcon Hill House," in Newport.

ROYAL HOSTS, the genial "Commodore" and his spouse, with world-girdling proclivities and hosts of friends in every port. The Newport stay of the Swedish royalties is quite without official duty, and shines resplendent just as the season gets under way.

AWAY ON AN INTERESTING mission, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney sails June 1 for France to see unveiled her memorial at St. Nazaire commemorating the landing of the first American troops on the soil of France.

ON THIS AUSPICIOUS journey, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, senior, accompanies her daughter, Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, sculptress, who enjoys a reputation world-wide in scope.

LIKEWISE FAMILIAR to thousands is the memorial crowning achievement of Mrs. Whitney's career with its young American crusader borne aloft on the outspread wings of an enormous eagle that, at high tide appears to float on the ocean.

MARLBORO PARISHIONERS PRESENT GOLD TO PRIEST

Marlboro, May 21.—The Rev. Francis A. McNeil, curate in the Immaculate Conception Church, was presented with a purse of gold by his parishioners with the wish that he attend the Eucharistic Congress in Chicago, next month.

Ex-Mayor James M. Hurley of this city made the presentation speech.

MOBILIZATION A HUGE TASK, SAYS DAVIS

Declares U. S. Would Need Forces of More Than 3,000,000 in Emergency

Washington, May 21 (A.P.).—Although the basic "six army" mobilization plan of the War Department involves forces aggregating only about 3,000,000, or one thirty-fifth of the population, the supervision that it would need only the diversion to its uses in war of one thirty-fifth of the [illegible] shelly wrong, Secretary of War Davis told Gold Lee Quartermasters Reserves at the opening session of their convention here.

The task of carrying out the instructions of Congress to make plans for a "complete and immediate mobilization," he said, "involved an almost unbelievable amount of labor," but could be accomplished by decentralization of the load "with control and supervision only in Washington."

"Everything we can foresee that will enable the industry of the country to absorb readily the wartime load is being studied out and planned now, so that a minimum of reorganization or disruption will be necessary on the outbreak of an emergency," Davis declared.

The convention includes business men as well as Quartermaster reserve officers and was called by Major General Cheatham, Quartermaster-General of the army, for a two-day discussion of industrial mobilization and related supply problems.

LLOYD GEORGE'S ARTICLE STIRS LIBERAL IRE

Members of Party, Resenting Views, Suggest He Should Resign Chairmanship

London, May 21 (Universal).—Former Premier David Lloyd George's article on the general strike in Great Britain, published in the Hearst and other American newspapers on May 8, has provoked a crisis of the first magnitude in the Liberal Party.

Resenting the views Mr. Lloyd George expressed in his article—views directly contrary to those of other Liberals such as Lord Oxford and Lord Grey of Fallodon—members of the party now are suggesting that the former prime minister should resign as their chairman in the House of Commons.

WILL NOT RESIGN.

The great war-time premier has adopted a defiant attitude. In a statement issued from his headquarters he says he has no intention of resigning the chairmanship at the present time and will explain his position in a public speech next week.

The dissentients within the Liberal Party are attempting to use Mr. Lloyd George's article to dethrone him and force him into the Labor Party, but he is not prepared to take such a drastic step himself and will continue to conduct his land reform campaign in the hope of obtaining eighty seats from the agricultural constituencies in the next general election, thus rehabilitating the position of the Liberal Party in Commons.

OFFICE DELUGED.

During the past twenty-four hours the London office of the Hearst newspapers have been deluged with requests for copies of Mr. Lloyd George's article from official quarters, from individual members of Parliament and from virtually the entire London and provincial press.

Due to the ravages of a rough sea voyage from Germany, a consignment of birds and animals valued at $3,000 intended for the Franklin Park Zoo, are being recruited for shipment to Nashua, N. H., after being rejected by Deputy Park Commissioner William F. Long, as unfit.

The birds and animals were shipped from the Hagenbeck animal quarters in Germany to Nashua, N. H., and thence to Boston, but on arrival were found to be in such bad condition that the deputy commissioner believed the contract with the shippers could not be carried out.

BANDITS FREE U. S. CAPTAIN

Peking, May 21 (A.P.).—After two days in the hands of bandits in northern Yunnan Province, one of the most remote parts of China, Captain Thomas J. Betts, United States Army, is again free, the American Legation was informed today.

Myrl S. Myers, United States Consul at Yunnan-Fu, telegraphed the Legation he had been advised by the local magistrate of Laiwowpo that the bandits had released their prisoner on May 15.

Captain Betts, attached to the American Legation for study of Chinese, was making a journey from French Indo-China to the Yangtze across one of the districts of China least traveled by foreigners.

Information travels slowly in China, even by telegraph. Hence, it appears that Captain Betts was freed before the American Legation was informed of his capture.

NOW BOY KNOWS IT DOESN'T PAY

A juvenile early today tried to emulate the exploits of "Jimmie" Sheehan, but didn't get away with it. An hour after the police got word that an auto belonging to William T. Haines, South street, Lynn, had been stolen, Motorcycle Officer Brown of the Back Bay station chased the machine along Commonwealth avenue at a high rate of speed. He caught the boy at Governor's square.

French War Front Still Littered With Dead

Chalons-Sur-Marne, France, May 21 (A.P.).—Bleached bones, tattered uniforms, rusted weapons and other reminders of the carnage of 1914-1918 are still strewn over the French battlefront.

General Girod, chairman of the Chamber of Deputies Military Affairs Committee, ascertained this in an inspection of the old "Red Zone."

He will demand an inquiry at once by the War Department and insist on a remedy.

"It is not only a question of respect for our dead," said the general. "It is also a question of ordinary civic decency for the Marne region."

COUNTESS VERA CASE DROPPED

Washington, May 21 (I.N.S.).—The government will not appeal the decision of the New York Federal District Court which permitted Vera Countess Cathcart to enter the United States after she had been detained at Ellis Island on charges of "moral turpitude" as result of living with the Earl of Craven in South Africa.

The Countess, now in England, secured her release in a writ of habeas corpus.

The department of justice, in an opinion to the labor department, recommended against an appeal.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY BEACON 50 YEARS OLD

Half a century of publication is observed this week by the Boston University Beacon, in a special anniversary number issued by the students of the College of Liberal Arts. The first issue was sent out in 1876, just seven years after the university was chartered by the Massachusetts Legislature.

Many prominent newspaper editors have been graduated from the ranks of contributors and editors to the college paper. John L. Bates, later Governor of Massachusetts, was editor of the Beacon in his college days. Today he is head of the Boston University Corporation.

BULLETS FAIL TO PIERCE VEST

Cambridge police officials, Captain Charles W. Searles, purchasing agent for the Boston police department, and Mayor Quinn of Cambridge stood by and watched Alvar Jacobson, 19, of New York, calmly smoke a cigarette while John J. de Boves shot him three times.

At the conclusion of the shooting, Jacobson calmly took off his bullet-proof vest and handed it to the spectators for inspection. De Boves, who did the shooting, is the inventor of the vest.

H. F. Schrantz, Harvard College freshie, was refused permission by college authorities to earn $25 by wearing the vest and becoming a target at the demonstration.

Morgue Attendant to Quit After 40 Years

Louis A. Pasco, who has had charge of the Boston City Hospital morgue for 40 years, will retire tomorrow.

During his service he saw the average number of patients per day increase from 250 to 900 and the average number of yearly deaths from 600 to 1500, while the number of physicians and nurses doubled.

BOY, 8, CHEATS DEATH EIGHTH TIME

Fall of 20 Feet From Dam After Being Carried 1,000 Feet by Current His Latest

Claremont, N. H., May 21.—Harry Carey has been saved from death once for every year that he has lived.

Harry is eight, and eight times he has been snatched back to safety just as the arms of the Grim Reaper were stretched out to enclose his tiny form.

The latest was just a few days ago when Herry fell into Sugar river, was carried by the swift current 1,000 feet, and pitched, in full view of horror-stricken scores, over a dam 20 feet high to the crags below.

WELL AND HAPPY.

Adelard Rosier, Deputy Sheriff E. B. Monta, and George McCusker recovered the body as it was being forced under the bridge and found that the boy was still alive. He's well and happy today.

"Well, I thought that was the last of me," Harry gasped, when revived after going over the dam.

A year ago Harry was struck by an auto, but soon recovered. Two years ago he was rescued from a swamp hole into which he had fallen.

Neighbors recall how he broke his collar bone, sliding down the veranda steps to the street. And others remember when he was almost scalded to death and doctors and nurses only gave him a few hour to live.

ALWAYS RECOVERS.

Rosy cheeked and sturdy, it is difficult to believe that Harry has had every contagious disease that came to the town. But he has, and he always recovers. Harry is so used to danger that no one can frighten him very much.

His mother says: "I think he was born under an unlucky star, but the Lord has see nesscf to him, because he has given him as many lives as a cat."

We're not so sure his star was "unlucky."

SCHOONER-YACHT BUILT ON FISHERMAN LINES

The handsome schooner-yacht Chance, designed by Columbus O'Donnell Iselin, a Harvard senior, and built at McKay's yard in Shelburne, N. S., for him to be used on an expedition to Labrador, arrived at T Wharf recently from the yard of her builders. Constructed on lines of a fisherman and measuring 70 feet over all, she is a pretty craft, yet sturdy and able to withstand rough weather, as indeed she was obliged to do on her way down the coast from Nova Scotia.

'HONEST JOHN'S' $5,000 BED BRINGS ONLY $58

New York, May 21.—Costing $5,000 when built, the ornate bed, once occupied by "Honest John" Kelly, brought a mere $58 when placed on auction in the old mansion at No. 141 West 41st street.

It is suspected the purchaser was an admirer of the noted gambler, for he announced his intention of using the bed for his own slumber nest.

The bed is a wonderful creation of scrolls and gargoyles, with the head of a woman looking down from the head of the bed, and a brass tube with an electric light affixed to the end hanging over the whole, with a green lamp shade shielding an elaborate globe.

MAN ARRESTED AFTER PICTURE OUTFIT RAID

Rockland, May 21.—Nathaniel S. Groce of Charles street was arrested charged with having improper pictures in his possession after the State police, under the direction of State Detective Albert L. Brouillard of Whitman, raided two rooms in a business block on Rockland Hill and seized a truck load of photographs, wood cuts and plates belonging to the Pilgrim Print Company. Groce is well known here and has been prominent for many years in politics.

And with acknowledgment of the kindly co-operation extended to us in the building and bettering of this business, a word of thanks would seem to be appropriate.

FROM BEGINNING to now—both as the modest men's store of yesterday and the greater Wolf's of today, it is and has been the one desire of this store to WIN confidence by unceasingly striving to deserve it. Growth in proportion to its achievements must come to any business, and in full measure according to the merit of accomplishments, good health, splendid development and the priceless gift of public confidence have come to Wolf's.

THE THREE YEARS now completed have been the biggest in all our history. That's very gratifying, for as our store has grown, so has the list of Wolf's friendships. We have always been a store for men of modest incomes, and always we shall feel it our obligation to continue to be.

* * *

NOT IN PRAISE of the past is this word printed; but merely to voice our thanks—to mention in passing that of the growth this business has enjoyed, an equal share is yours. We have worked to become an asset to our city, and with your co-operation have succeeded. Three years ago we were born anew and, without due thanks to you, how could we celebrate?

BOSTON MEN ASSAIL TWO-THIRDS RULE

Al Smith's Fight for Its Abolition Finds Support in Hub

Governor Smith's movement to abolish the two-thirds rule received added impetus when two more prominent Massachusetts Democrats joined him in his fight to throw the rule out of the Democratic presidential conventions.

JOSEPH A. FLYNN of Dorchester, delegate to the last national convention:

After the scenes that we enacted at the last national convention I certainly favor the abolition of the two-thirds and unit rules in nominating candidates for president and vice-president.

Both rules should have been abolished years ago and if they had been, the disaster which followed the democratic party after the convention could have been avoided.

JAMES A. (JERRY) WATSON, former city councillor and delegate to the last national convention—Majority rule should prevail. It is the best way by far in selecting nominees for President and Vice-President. Delegates to national conventions, as those at State conventions, should be free. I am in favor of the abolishment of this rule, as well as the unit rule."

ROBERT DINSMORE, Representative from East Boston and a delegate to the last Democratic National Convention—"The two-thirds rule deviates from American principles. It is a boss rule pure and simple and the quicker it is abolished the better for the party. The will of the majority should govern in these nominations as it governs later in the elections."

PETER J. FITZGERALD, representing the 13th Suffolk District—The obnoxious two-thirds rule governing the nomination of president and vice-president in the national convention should have been abolished years ago. It is inconsistent with the principles of the party and permits an organized minority to defeat the popular choice. It opens the way for all kinds of compromises with a disastrous effect on the party itself. Governor Smith of New York is to be commended for initiating the movement to throw this hindering rule into the discard.

GIRL LABORITE M. P. WEARS BOYISH BOB

London, May 21.—Miss Ellan Wilkinson, Laborite M. P., demonstrated that her radicalism wasn't entirely confined to politics by displaying the first Eton crop ever seen on the floor of the House of Commons. Most of the members agreed that her new style of coiffure suited the diminutive Laborite.

What Do You Know About That

Washington.—Millions of dollars are spent by railroads on pretty pictures showing beautiful women getting into and out of berths. If Joseph N. Teal, a lumberman, is correct. He made the statement in arguing against freight increases.

New York—Dr. A. J. Rayo's views on smoking, as explained by his secretary in a letter to a correspondent: Neither he nor any woman in his family smokes; he dislikes to see women smoke, but a woman has as much right to smoke as a man; smoking is a distinct detriment to many persons, but most men who smoke get much comfort from it without demonstrable harm.

Harris, N. J.—Whiskey is being sold to children in "hell holes" for 10 cents a pint, it is asserted by the Rev. George L. Fitzpatrick. Some of the sales are in grocery stores.

New York—Earl Carroll of the bathtub is happily married and has been so for ten years. Asked to pose, he caught the Mrs. by the hand and said, "Let me be snapped with my wife. There are lots of people who don't know I have one."

Paris.—The Richmond Blues and the Connecticut Footguards may not know it, but they were the subject of a demonstration against what the French regard as the New York offensive against the franc. As they were parading the Champs Elysees there were shouts of "Long live the dollar at 35" in French.

* * *

New York—Dapper Don Colina, who considers that his reputation as a crook is 99 per cent. undeserved, is to stay a bachelor. "The woman I would want would not have me, and the woman who would want me I would not have."

Jerusalem.—Moslems are rejoicing the fez with straw hats.

"We women are indifferent to prohibition

Such was the charge made by Mrs. Martha N. Brooks, former alderman of Gloucester, [illegible] at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters in the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

JOLSON STAND APPROVED

New York, May 21 (Universal)—A wave of approbation of the stand taken by Al Jolson in resigning from the Westchester-Biltmore County Club, because of that exclusive institution's objection to his Jewish friends, rose at the Cheese Club luncheon at Libby's Hotel, recently opened as a hostelry, catering exclusively to Jewish patronage.

"We have this hotel and other hotels, and other clubs that are big nouns for all the Jews that are thrown out, through jealousy, or any other place," Harry Hershfield, president of the club, said think hard about the "beer and wine" question in big cities. The President is as dry as Sahara's sands, or, if not, he would act as such, as long as the Constitutional amendment and Volstead Act endure

But some Republican sop must be offered to the wet vote Senator Wadsworth, Republican from New York, is as wet as Governor Smith himself. That might help. But there are women voters, the Methodist and other clergy, the country districts, generally "dry," to be considered. And to offset the Methodist Church, there is the Catholic Church, with its three American cardinals urging temperance, but opposed to the Volstead Act.

STEERING between Scylla and Charybdis would be child's play, compared to steering a political bark in 1928. It might be rewritten: "Thus, when I shun ice water, your father, I fall into light beer and wine, your mother."

MISS FLORENCE MONAHAN, who runs the Minnesota State Reformatory for Women, says the three causes of crime here are "sex, automobile, prohibition," and adds those three causes are unknown in Europe That will surprise Europe, weak on prohibition and automobiles, but not on the first of the three crime causes.

DIDO WAS RANTING up and down the beach: Anthony leaving the wise, beautiful sister of Augustus to follow Cleopatra, and Abelard ruining a fine career, long before the first American bobbed her hair, shortened her skirt, powdered her nose and forgot her grandmother's precepts.

SURGERY MIGHT HELP with the "sex" crime cause, as it did in Abelard's case.

But prohibition will stay, if only in a modified form, and soon 5,000,000 automobiles will be added to the 22,000,000 already running around in America

What have automobiles to do with crime or immorality? Dick Turpin had no automobile, the poor girl with the scarlet letter had none.

FREDERICK THE GREAT'S father followed little boys, heavy stick in hand, saying, "I'll make you love me," when they fled before him.

The French have similar difficulty in winning the affections of Syria, now under French mandate, thanks to the League of Nations

Yesterday the French found it necessary to bombard Damascus from the air, once more, and the killing of five hundred noncombatants was an unpleasant incident.

WHAT MAKES it seem worse in pure prohibition America is the correspondent's statement. "French soldiers are well supplied with good red wine, which keeps them cheerful, healthy, protects them from diseases prevalent in the East."

Think of sailing through the clouds, drinking red wine, and bombarding Mohammedans forbidden by the prophet to drink anything alcoholic.

SAILORS in our navy are feeling proud and happy, probably. An order issued grants them "a chewing gum ration," while on sea duty No grog, or any wicked thing like that, of course, but when bombs are bursting in air, the American sailor remembers Paul Jones and Dewey, pulls out a stick of spearmint, and is ready for the fray

SENATOR REED of Missouri suggests that millions were spent in the Illinois and Pennsylvania Senatorship campaigns and he will investigate. If his fears are justified, all concerned should go to jail, says he, and "a condition of corruption and rottenness exists in this country that ought to arouse the extreme vigilance of every man who loves his country and adores its flag"

CORRUPTION OUGHT to stir up great excitement, but it won't, and nobody will go to jail Who went to jail for the money spent before the Republican convention that nominated Harding? It may sound cynical, but this country is hardened to the fact that money plays a big part in our government, and is used to carry out "big money" plans.

NOBILE, the Italian on Amundsen's disastrous trip to the North Pole, was first to tell the world about it, in a radio message to Mussolini in Rome

Amundsen was indignant about this early publication, saying: "There may be things in it I would want to contradict."

Considering that Nobile designed the Norge, directed the construction of that dirigible and piloted it over the North Pole and back, carrying Amundsen and the others as his passengers, it would seem that he might be allowed to tell about it. It was an Italian dirigible in spite of its Norwegian name.

10,000 BOTTLES TO TEST CURRENTS, TIDES

Washington, May 21 (A.P.)—Ten thousand sealed bottles will be turned loose in New York Harbor as part of a plan proposed by Lieut. S. Tuttle, chief engineer of New York city, for a comprehensive study of currents and tidal conditions in those waters.

Bottles will contain cards requesting finders to advise Tuttle by mail as to time and place of discovery. The bottles will be released in lots of 2,500 at bi-weekly intervals beginning next month.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

'RED LAMP' IS FINE MYSTERY

You'll like the Red Lamp.

It's a corker, this new story of mystery into which Mary Roberts Rinehart has woven threads of an exquisite romance. The story begins next Monday, May 24, in the Boston Evening American.

There's not a dull moment in the entire tale. Mysteries and strange incidents crowd fast upon each other, the suspense grows with every page as the plot takes a new twist and the finger of suspicion points now in one direction and now in another.

Who lighted the Red Lamp? Why did Evelyn Graden keep his diary in code? Who spirited away the diary in the drawer? These are questions you will ask yourself all the way through this baffling mystery tale.

And we want to follow the precedent set in attempts to unravel the mystery and the young lawyer who tries his hand at the baffling task.

See if you can guess the solution.

MOTHER PREVENTED BY SON FROM SUICIDE

Discovered by illness, Mrs. Elizabeth McLean, 42, mother of five children attempted to end her life last night in her home at No. 10 Arthur park, Somerville, by drinking a disinfectant. Before she could swallow much of the liquid her 15-year-old son, Arthur, knocked the bottle from her hand and called for help. Mrs. McLean was removed to the Somerville Hospital.

POTATOES DROP IN PRICES

Still a long the lowly, but very important, potato is down and up to the peak of the average season with a jolt today of from 15 to 85 cents per peck. The price drop is just as unexpected as the rise.

The increasing shipment of new potatoes from the South and the arrival of sweet potatoes on the market is responsible for the drop, grocery dealers say. Sweet potatoes are selling at 10 cents per pound.

POSSE HUNTS ATTACKER OF GIRL GOING TO SCHOOL

Freehold N. J., May 21.—State Troopers, bloodhounds and farmers are scouring the woods near here in search of a fiend who attacked a 13-year-old girl and left her unconscious in a field. The girl was on her way to school when the man, with a mask on, is said to have struck her over the head with a club.

A Timid Bride From the Country Falls Prey to a Social Hyena

Hal Seared Her Charlotte felt his fingers on her throat She uttered a cry for help. Posed by Mary Ann Dentler and Ray Collins. Photo by Charles G. Snyder.

Dave Manning, Boston engineer, who has piled up a fortune, meets and weds Charlotte Connolly, daughter of a college professor. He is verging on middle age, she is in her early twenties. They come to Boston to live. Dick and Phyllis Fenway are Dave's intimate friends in Boston social life. Phyllis is given Charlotte to introduce to Boston. Charlotte is unused to city ways. She meets Phil Van Alan, admirer of Phyllis. Leila, flapper daughter of David Manning, thinks Charlotte a mere kid.

Charlotte meets Lawrence Hill. He presses his attentions on the young wife. She, lonesome, and, not a little proud of a conquest, makes him her "tame cat," as Phyllis calls Phil Van Alan.

Then one night, when Manning is presumed to be in Chicago, Hill forces himself into Charlotte's presence. Dave returns suddenly and finds Hill, who passes himself off as a physician, called by Charlotte. Manning appears to believe the story of Charlotte, but later sends a lawyer, who arranges a separation.

Hill, completely in control of Charlotte, orders that she give a dinner for his scum friends.

Charlotte defies Hill and tells him she will not pay his gift bills for women.

(CHAPTER XI)

"I THINK of it Fenway repeated slowly. I dared to believe—I was so desirable as to believe that this . . . should come here with that look—with love of yours! And now . . . he broke off with an unsteady, mirthless laugh and passed a shaking hand over his fore head which was beaded with moisture, "now I find that it was you. What a retort! And what a sorrow, too!"

Charlotte's gaze fell before the stark accusation in his eyes. Her face was burning. She leaned against the edge of a table and fought for self control.

But even as she so bend in the shame of it, a swift and resentful reflected against her. She was caught over and over again to betray—

"If only Phyllis doesn't come out! If only she remains in the room! If only he goes away before he learns the truth!"

Terror of Hill's return while Fenway was still there forced her to interrupt his tirade against her.

"Will you go, please?" she forced her dumb lips to say. "I have nothing to say. Please go away."

He made her an irate bow.

"By all means. I would not dis pleat your resolution through a mistaken impression on my part. But I advise you to choose with more tact as well known to your friend's other favorite, who is quite evidently yes one and out to cause trouble."

He paused a moment and then in another and quieter tone he added:

"Ah, Charlotte how could you! The sweet little girl whom I am given in marriage to one of the great men on earth. How could you betray him like that! How could you be so false—you who were born as Ruth!"

The sob caught in her throat almost choked her. She crossed her arms over her breast as though to shield herself from his words or from the sight of his face.

"Shall I like to hear that?" he said. "Or have you've something to say in your defense?"

He turned toward the door, but he used with his hand on the knob.

"I suppose it isn't necessary to remind you that there will be no further friendship between you and Phyllis. I must ask you never to visit my home again, or expect Phyllis to come to yours."

Charlotte bowed her head. She could not speak.

"I am returning to Boston on the next train, to fling myself at Phyllis' feet and beg her forgiveness." Fenway's voice softened a trifle.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Marie Queen of Romance

"CONSEQUENCES"

HAVE you ever played the old game of Consequences? It is an amusing, rather silly little game, that children and grown-ups can enjoy together.

First, you write "Where they met." Then fold over your paper slip and pass it to your neighbor. Then you write "HIS name," fold it and pass it as before. Then comes "HER name." Then "What he said," and "What she said." Follow these by "Consequences," and finally by "What the world said."

As no one knows what his neighbor has written before the slips were folded and passed, you can imagine the ridiculous jumble that comes out when the slips are opened and read. The most unexpected names are paired off together in the most absurd places. The two say wildly grotesque things to each other, followed by ludicrous consequences and the slashing critical slam of the world.

But because the one who writes the first criticism has no idea of what has gone before, it comes out astonishingly like the way the world DOES criticise the many happenings the background of which it knows nothing about whatever!

We have played this simple amusing game for many, many years in our family, but only recently did I discover there was a moral in it I had never thought of before. The moral of consequences, of cause and effect.

Having become to a certain degree a looker-on at life, I begin to see morals in most things. One of the most relentless and inevitable, one that cannot be run away from, is that each action, each word, even the most indifferent, has a continuation—a consequence.

If you open a door, you see what is on the other side. Call, and someone comes. If you write a letter and send it to the post, some one receives it and shares your thoughts. If you eat a dish, you experience the results of it good or bad, and you cannot stay the processes of digestion and assimilation. If you pitch a flower you have robbed it forever of the possibilities of seeding. Say to someone, "I love you," and you set in motion events of which perhaps you did not dream the moment before.

Thus every single, solitary thing we do or say has an inevitable result, a consequence—often the most jumbled one. The consequence may not be important, or it may be. But it exists. It cannot be undone.

Nothing stands still, neither time nor thought, neither the moment nor the century, neither good nor evil. It all moves on in its appointed course, inevitably, inexorably, with strength, talent, labor, nothing can hold back the inexorable progress of this onward movement.

There is a tremendous warning in it all. What you do you cannot undo. You cannot unsay what you have said. Like Juggernaut, it becomes a relentless force.

The initial impetus may be tiny, but it was enough. And so—let's be careful of what we do and say.

For always there are—Consequences!

VOICING THE GREAT VOICE OF DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

Tune in at the close of WEEI'S program each night for Bill Harrison's report on radio conditions.

201-A TUBE AS TRANSMITTER

By SAMUEL CURTIS, JR.

It is doubtful if the average broadcast listener realizes the efficiency to which short wave radio transmission has been developed since Calvin Coolidge," to the broadcast that usually means a thousand miles or more, from the standard broadcasting station. The transmitting takes place at night and the only when conditions are favorable. Reception from points over 2,000 miles during day time is not to be depended upon.

During the past summer and fall particularly during the Marconi Arctic Expedition, which was in the vicinity of 40 minutes have been used very successfully in the hands of young amateurs who constitute the real "wizards" of radio will use nothing but a 45 watt Hytone wave. The system is readily seen in the results obtained.

The Wilkins Expedition has been using a complete station, which operates entirely on dry cells. Both "A" and "B" power for the whole equipment weighs but a few pounds, and can be easily carried by one hand. The set uses two 201-A tubes, which are connected with their elements in parallel. It is designed to run on any wave length 14 to 75 meters. The wave length generally used has been in the neighborhood of 25 meters.

This little dry cell outfit—using only a few watts, and a single wire antenna strung on a 20-foot bamboo pole, has come to be of considerable field of use in Arctic work, several hundred of which have only within ten miles of location with such a set and seem to be fully as good results as day as in the evening. When we see poor broadcast fans ever had anything to compare with this for a thrill!

PUT OLD NORSE LEGENDS ON AIR

"The Norse Mythology" will be described by James P. H. Hyndman, from WHAP next Monday evening at 9:15, tracing its strong influence upon our language and ideas. A striking example," says Hyndman, "is that the days of the week are all named for Norse gods—Tuesday, Thor, Friday, Frea, and the word 'day' alone, supposing one does not

With the recent radio improvement of radio circuits it is now possible to automatically receive pictures and written or typewritten messages over extensive distances, according to Captain R. H. Ranger of the Signal Reserve Corps. Captain Ranger, who is the inventor of the Radio Corporation's system, is now demonstrating and receiving pictures, printed messages and drawings via radio, point out the military value of this new phase of radio.

"The first step back of the invention was the necessity for intelligence via the ether," he says. "Radio is now used in military activities to a considerable extent, but only with automatic apparatus. It is dangerous to send messages by code and authorized by the Department of commerce.

Radio Briefs

Inquiries as to the owners of American radio receiving sets and parts have been filed with the Department of Commerce from prospective purchasers and agents in London and Manchester, England and Bucharest, Rumania.

A hotel in Shaftesbury England, has been named "Listen Inn."

The British postmaster has succeeded in convicting 124 persons out of 135 charged with operating wireless sets without licenses, according to Wireless World.

The Airways Radio Service, in Los Angeles has just been authorized to operate three special and radio stations in connecting with its aircraft and passenger service.

The stations are 6XAT at Sandlot, Cal.; 6XBE at Las Vegas, Nevada, and 6XAT at Salt Lake. A fourth station may be added to the three as soon as the Department of commerce.

Radio Queries

Q. W. P. Nashua, N. H. I have a Cooley Tuner, which is supposed to take a Battery. I would like to know how to connect it.

A.—The C battery in the Cooley Tuner is used to control the "A" post and the minus "A" post. In addition to this you will find a "B" post which jumps across two binding posts. This wire must be run from the C battery to the terminal on the set marked minus C, and the positive terminal of the C battery to the minus "A" terminal on the set. This will make two connections going to the minus A post. If this is O. K.

Q.—P. M. T. Braintree. I have a Cooley Tuner set. Have used it 108 hours and it battery still registers 6 volts. There is a big tree on my lot, almost touching corner of my house. Is it possible that I am getting some of my power from that? Also I am using cheap tubes but it gives good results on local stations. Would more money and better tubes give me greater distance?

A.—Regardless of how long your battery registers six volts on the voltmeter it will not operate your set properly unless it is of 24 amperes, or more, capacity, and is an exceptionally powerful one of its type. With regard to the cheap tubes, the only thing you can do is to try them one at a time in the set and see which one gives the best results. As a rule, the main difference between a cheap and expensive tube is that the cheaper ones are of an inferior and the filaments are not as uniform as they should be. When they are new, and matched up carefully, they will operate almost as well as the more expensive ones, but in time the difference will begin to show up, and especially with regard to distance.

MINERS HEAR RADIO MUSIC

Tenders of radio authorities that broadcasts may be received anywhere that humans can live were well made with three reports of miners' world radio reception which were received to KOA, Denver.

The first was written by two miners who said they listened to a noon organ recital from the Denver station in the depths of the Anaconda Eagle Gold mine at Cripple Creek, Colo. They used a five-tube portable receiver, their battery and tuned in on the 21st level, approximately 2,100 feet below the earth's surface.

Woman's Orchestra Concert

Beatrice Oliver's Little Symphony, with Ruth Kemper as director, will be heard in a radio concert for the first time through WEAF next Monday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock.

TO HOLD RADIO MEMORIAL

A program dedicated to the memory of the late Victor Herbert, one of America's most popular musical composers, will be broadcast by WEAF and several of its associated stations beginning at 10 o'clock next Wednesday.

The program which will bring the efforts of many of the nation's musical leaders to the radio public is under the direction of Nathan Hein, who has secured the services of the musicians who constituted Victor Herbert's own orchestra in addition to an array of notable talent.

Among the famous conductors who will lead the orchestra on this occasion are Max Bendix, Nahan Franko, Henry Hadley, Nathaniel Shilkret, John Philip Sousa and Mr. Hein.

GIRLS WORE BEADS---AND LET'S SEE WHAT ELSE

New York, May 21 (A.P.)—Two revivals of plays and one new revue constituted the openings in Broadway theatres this week.

The Grand Pantomimes" presented by the Theatre Guild with Winter Garden, was unusual in the matter of its production, but the play itself was not regarded as of the highest order. The revue, "Lady Do," was a conventional affair, and the revival of "The Circle" by Somerset Maugham followed the usual pattern.

The public is now invited to be entertained for a week by a group of five players who have been engaged to present a repertoire of popular successes, and a company of beauty contestants, one of whom is to be selected as the most beautiful girl in America, are to appear in person.

The best of the revivals was that of "The Climax" by Edward Sheldon. This play with its cast of seven persons, went into the Forty-eighth Street Theatre, where it received a kindly reception.

"The House of Usher," opening for the second attempt this season at the Mayfair did not fare so well.

B. C. LOOMS AS WINNER OF N. E. TRACK TITLE

BOWDOIN MAY UPSET THE DOPE

Tech Also Has Strength, but Not Enough on Paper to Finish In Front

By STED CHANDLER

In the old days Dartmouth used to win the New England Intercollegiate track meets with ease. Recently before the war the Big Green outgrew the competition. When the meets were resumed Dartmouth was among the missing, the only one of the old time "Big Five" left.

For a while the Engineers took Dartmouth's place at the top, but there came a time when the Easterners deemed others in B. C. and Bowdoin equal to the task and one fine day Dartmouth was conspicuous by its absence from the track field.

Sted Chandler

Frankly, it doesn't look like Tech this year. It seems as if B. C. is headed for the Line Hat Trick. Tech is much stronger than it has been for a long time, and new personal records have been promised us by Gardner Engineers recently.

But on paper as the program is entered in the meet, Bowdoin takes a point lead over B. C. with Tech a third with the remainder of each holder receiving little as Boo Seavey's underdogs. Maine continues to hold a lot of power, although not much since has been added to the ranks of the three teams first named.

NOME SURE WINNERS.

The Inventor of Greek Fire

THE inventor of Greek fire, the secret of which has been lost, was Callinicus of Heliopolis, an Egyptian architect. He is said to have destroyed with this fire a Saracen fleet attacking Constantinople about 670 A. D.

This Day In Our History

THIS is the anniversary of the beginning of the Black Hawk war in 1831. It lasted over a year. Its leader was captured. Both Lincoln and Jefferson Davis served in the campaign.

Absorbing Story of Life in Boston Today Is Revealed

can't I convince you to come with me?"

She shook her head and turned away from him.

After a minute, she heard the door close. She buried her face in her hands and her shoulders shook.

But she only dared give away to emotion for a moment. There was still Phyllis to think of.

She went to the door leading to the bedroom and knocked softly.

The room was empty. Phyllis had fled through the other door into the corridor. Her bag was on a chair and her hat and coat on the bed. She had slipped away probably at the first sound of her husband's voice. Perhaps she had gone down to [illegible] with her departing husband from home to [illegible] afternoon and the week-end which had taken her away from them.

Her violent assertion that Fenway could not [illegible] more than that. It was the only one Nina counted of been on Hill's boat. Courage had failed her at the showdown, and she had made her exit safely from a dangerous situation.

Relief and reaction from the tension through which she had just passed had brought Charlotte to the [illegible] of exhaustion. She wanted to [illegible] away and sob her aching, tired heart out.

But work was done. She could [illegible] and wait for the awful retribution which Larry Hill would be sure to inflict upon her if he [illegible] and let her part in the failure of [illegible] romantic rendezvous.

She straightened her hat, picked up her discarded gloves and purse and opened the door into the corridor softly.

On the threshold she came face to face with Hill himself.

His first expression when he encountered Charlotte [illegible] was one of [illegible] astonishment.

For a moment, when the scientific[illegible] of her possession [illegible] dawned on him, his face became black as [illegible] cloud.

What are you doing here?" he demanded.

Charlotte made a helpless [illegible] gesture. Now that the moment she had dreaded had arrived she could find no words.

He pushed her [illegible] into the room and closed the door behind him.

Then he strode across the [illegible] to the bedroom revealed a [illegible] of occupancy also.

He turned savagely upon Charlotte, who was still hovering on the [illegible] between the drawn door and the necessity of re[illegible] to keep Hill from calling her Phyllis or perhaps encountering Dick Fenway, who could hardly have left the hotel as yet.

Hill a Demon

Where is she?" demanded Hill. What have you done with Phyllis? Meddling little cat?

She went away of her own accord." Charlotte found the words faintly.

"You drove her away. You have frightened her into leaving. Don't [illegible] to me."

He grasped her wrist and dragged her from the doorway. Then he closed the door violently and addressed her ominously:

"Now come across with the truth. I warn you, you'd better. Lying won't help you any."

She had never seen him looking quite so angry. His whole face was reddened, with the veins standing out like whip cords on his forehead.

He spoke through his teeth in staccato accents:

I am telling you the truth, Larry," she faltered. "I did come here to try to make Phyllis return to her husband, but she refused. While we were talking, however, Dick Fenway came——"

"What?" ejaculated Hill incredulously.

"Yes, Larry. Some girl telephoned Dick that [illegible] had gone away with you. He returned here from Maine. Just after Phyllis left the house. He came running here, raging, of course but I managed to get her into the [illegible] before he saw her. His threats, of course, were [illegible] nothing, the week-end [illegible] but to make a search [illegible] for me was announcing me, she evidently slipped away through the other door into the corridor. When I went to look [illegible] was gone."

A [illegible] sigh escaped Hill's face. He stood with folded arms, looking Charlotte up and down and the quality of his gaze set her to trembling.

"That's likely story, I congratulate you."

"But it's true, Larry, I swear it."

"Indeed," he said slowly, "and what proof can you give me, pray, that Phyllis was actually here? How can you show me that he and not [illegible] frightened Phyllis away?"

She made a little despairing gesture.

"There is nothing but my word."

"And I know of how little consequence that is," Hill replied deliberately. "Your thousand sinners, you [illegible] and rebent whenever it suits your whim. You have no sense of loyalty to anybody but your own selfish self. You've always gotten away with it before, but you won't this time, my sweet Charlotte. I am going to teach you that you can't interfere with my affairs—that is, not safely."

He took a step toward her and she shrank back, terrified. He looked quite capable of killing her. His face was white and deadly quiet. She [illegible] frightened her beyond words. His breath came [illegible] and his mouth [illegible]

"Please, Larry," Charlotte implored him, as she retreated before his slow advance.

But he was wasting words and time. He had her. "You drove Phyllis [illegible] from me. Now you shall pay for it," he added significantly.

She Fears Death

Charlotte retreated until she felt the wall behind her but still Hill approached her with his deadly look in his eyes. Her blood turned to ice with the terrified stare of a boy cornered in a snake. She felt as if she were alone in a cage with a wild animal.

Her hand reached out to grasp her. She eluded him, dodged under his outflung arm and cried across the room:

"Open the door but Hill was [illegible] She made for the open door of the bedroom. Again he intercepted her.

Pitching her over a table fell [illegible] Charlotte darted wildly [illegible] and there with Hill always close behind her.

Finally her foot caught in the cord of the floor lamp and the room was plunged into semi-darkness.

Hill seized her. She felt his fingers reaching on her throat and uttered a piercing shriek, a wild, despairing cry for help.

The crash of a door forcibly opened pierced Charlotte's fading consciousness. She felt Hill's fingers release her throat.

She had a confused sense of many voices—and [illegible] by loud tones of authority!

"Hold on there! What's happening here?"

Hill had released her like a flash, and nevertheless, she sank to the floor, burying her flushed, stained face in her hands. She felt that she would rather die than lift her head and see the hostile faces gathered round her.

Hill, on the other hand, met the interruption with [illegible] assurance.

"What is the meaning of this," he demanded coolly.

"Oh easy there," a man with the indubitable signs of a hotel detective warned him. "We heard the lady yell. You will have to explain that to the manager and the condition of this room, too—it's a sight. What's been going on there?"

Her Awful Shame

"I'm sorry," said Hill with an easy bow, "we disturbed you. My friend has turned to Charlotte, who still crouched on the floor, and lifted her with every evidence of gentleness—"my wife is given to these attacks frequently. Some day I fear she will do herself harm. In the meantime," he added with a jaunty air, "she does harm to the furnishings."

Charlotte wrenched herself free.

"It's not true," she panted. "It's a lie. I'm not his wife——"

"Shut up!" Hill admonished her in an undertone, but not before the detective had got the full significance of the situation.

He turned to the two bellboys and the porter who accompanied him and said:

"All right, you can go down now."

"All the World a Worshiper of Beauty," Says Nell Brinkley

THE world today has fallen in love with Beauty

Beauty of one kind and another. Woman-beauty mostly. But also beauty of house—place to live—beauty of material things, cloths—clothes—furniture—beauty of the pagan things of nature, and even a puzzled groping after real spiritual beauty. Every page you turn today has the word beautiful or beauty somewhere upon it.

Are we splendid—kin to other beauty-loving times—are we "Greek" or medieval Italy—or are we just plain silly?

Some folks say, "silly," small-minded, worshiping a barbarous faith. But I know very well that most of us it is a hunger that's as old as the world, for a thing that is to us a necessity

Some folks have some sheer beauty in them, that they may look at it and take another happy hold on life. Most of us are miserable without that clinging from the rainbow. For one man the woman he loves just MUST be beautiful. Or he must think so. Isn't it great that he does think so even when she isn't! For another man, the sea is beautiful. Other things about him can be as plain and without beauty as the pot that insulted the kettle, but if he has the sea—the sight of it—the smell of it—the mists of vessels in sight—the sounds and boat-doings that go on where the green water laps row-boats and floats and hauling out places, then he makes a splendid husband, because he is HAPPY. He has his soul-food. For another man it is the mountains; and if you do not understand that he needs them, and you keep him away from them, you are downright wicked.

For this one it is home. For that one beautiful books. For one it is farm and flowers, cattle and the green grass. For another it is a trip to the museum. For someone else it is color. To some girls, the sight of another girl's face that is beautiful is deep pleasure.

To the little mother her baby's face is beautiful But she doesn't always so without the suspicion that she MAY be wrong. And she hopes ardently that it WILL be.

The world today seems to love beauty, no matter what other differences there may be in it. And I'm glad of it.

Why the old world itself is so full of beauty that it is nothing to get a surprise over that the plain girls are raising heaven and earth to try to get a little of it for themselves.

And I'm a great admirer of being too. But I think we need dessert after the whole wheat when we do eat. NELL BRINKLEY

I'll see to this fellow. Sorry, madame, that I'll have to ask you to accompany me to the manager's office."

That seemed to Charlotte the last straw. She suddenly fainted in such a manner! To have the worst possible interpretation put upon her presence in Hill's room! To be the victim of a disgraceful row! How mean!

This was her reward for her unselfish effort to keep Phyllis!

She smoothed her hair and gown, which had become disarranged in her struggle with Hill.

"I'm ready," she said quietly and drew her fur closely around her throat to hide the red marks made by Hill's fingers.

Anyone who knew how [illegible] managed to go through [illegible] such [illegible] The [illegible] [illegible] her only a hazy consciousness of [illegible] interview with a distinguished looking but rigidly severe hotel proprietor, of a ring of staring faces, of the rapid opinion of herself and Hill from the hotel, of a gaping crowd as they drove away in a taxi.

Hill, now you've done it." Hill remarked as he settled back in his seat. "That certainly was a fine display of temper. I'll bet it's the whole story is in the paper tomorrow morning. I spotted a couple of reporters in the crowd as we came out of the hotel."

Charlotte uttered a little sound of dismay.

"Oh," she moaned, "surely they won't do that to us.

"You bet your sweet life they will, unless the hotel shuts them up for its own sake. But it's a peach of a story. You should thank your lucky stars you didn't succeed in getting [illegible] Fenway. The only reason we escaped was because the hotel wanted to keep it quiet.

At the station Hill left her.

"I dare say there's no reason why you can't go back to Boston alone. You didn't seem to have much trouble getting here by yourself. I don't intend to have my entire week-end spoiled. There are plenty of other hotels here where I can go."

Late the next day, when she was again at home, recalling [illegible] and retreshed, she stared [illegible] the morning [illegible]

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BLACKMAN:

Is it proper for a girl to call a boy on the telephone?

Or is it proper for girls to send her boy friends Christmas or Easter cards?

(3) When out to lunch or dinner with a boy friend should one speak very much while eating?

"JACKIE."

IT isn't exactly "improper," but it is cheapening to the girl. A girl had best limit her telephone calls to boys to ones that are absolutely necessary—and then make those as brief as possible. A manly boy wishes to do the pursuing himself, and he hesitates to pursue if he knows that the girl will telephone to him four times for every telephone call that he makes.

(2) Yes, the sending of these expressions of friendliness is proper. Only, if the cards are chosen with perfect taste—it's perfect.

(3) Do you remember the [illegible] in "Macbeth": "To-morrow [illegible] at home." If you dine [illegible] with a boy just to eat, it is, indeed, best to "eat at home"—and silent. The point of having luncheon or dinner with a friend is to converse with the friend. The [illegible] should not be used merely as [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

OUT of New York's million and more people, five thousand of them walk to work every day. It's wonderful to be able to go to the office under your own power.

PEOPLE should use their feet. It's the cheapest form of transportation in the country.

EVERY man has an average of sixteen thousand miles in each foot.

IF they don't last you this long you have a right to sue your folks.

OF course, walking gets tiresome, but every chiropodist is often a service station.

IT does your feet good to take them in once or twice a month and have them sponged and pressed.

ONE fellow said he preferred a wooden leg because when it got tired he took it off and carried it under his arm

IT'S a shame that nature didn't provide us with detachable feet so that we could keep one of them at home and the other one down town

IT'D be wonderful to have an extra foot or two to wear over the week-end.

A BROOKLYN man has been having a tough time. He suffers from insomnia but his feet are always going to sleep.

HE has to put alarm clocks in his shoes to keep them awake.

A CHICAGO fellow claims he has the best set of feet in the world. He says he's walked ten thousand miles without a puncture.

HE'S never even had as much as a toe untaxed.

DAILY SHORT STORY

REVENGEFUL DISCORD

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

A DREAMY fellow who stepped carelessly off the curb hugging a big fiddle as though he and it had just been married a century or two ago driven by a woman in an ermine dreamy young man living on his back among the splinters of his cello.

He did not lie there so long. He was a young Italian, a Neapolitan rather, yclept Benedito di Pasquale. And the di Pasquale do not lie. He was, too, a fine 'cellist. He loved music with all his fine musician heart, he loved his 'cello better. That is to say Meiardi had made long years ago at Piavenza. Benedito could not stay long on his back; the picture he took with him when the car knocked his propa away was that of his cherished bass transformed to matchwood

So Benedito was on his feet almost as soon as the car had stopped long enough to let the lady flash her pretty silks to the ground and hasten back to gaze upon the havoc she had wrought.

Before she could inquire for his health; before even she could open her mouth, Bened in began to show that he had the blood of Italy and Garibaldi in his veins and hands, anyway.

He waved them [illegible] elves to her astonished ears. He Charlestoned like an inspired dervish until the fenders [illegible] which he collected quarters [illegible] the accident and [illegible] [illegible] he told somebody [illegible] Lily's ancestors. They had been [illegible] of princes and noblemen [illegible] she herself was no [illegible] of the same class as Lucrezia Borgia, Catherine of [illegible] other fly-away ladies.

All this he told her in Italian. It was the only language in which he could be adequately abusive. The crowd, not understanding a word, as is the way with most crowds, applauded. Their cheers raised Benedito's fury to its high heat. Then his raving turned to weeping. He gathered up a few odd strings and a peg or so and embraced them

The crowd looked sympathetic. The lady driver did not. She was an American. . . . no question about that. But she fortunately or otherwise, spoke Italian. All the nasty things Benedito had said she took to herself, as women will. And she came back like Mitchell talking about airships or the average soak on prohibition.

Her ancestors had nothing on Benedito. She must have been well grounded in history, for she traced the Di Pasquale's descent back to the first ape-man who stole his sister's cocoanuts. Then she trampled upon his musical attainments. He was a ham, or the Italian equivalent thereto. He was a bum, an undesirable alien. His turpitude was unmistakable.

She ended by drawing out a checkbook, writing off an item for five hundred dollars . . . people looked over her shoulder, saw it and gasped . . . and threw it at Benedito with such force that had it been a brick, he would have been indistinguishable from the cello.

Benedito may have thought it an ultimatum. Anyway, he tore it in as many bits as a man can in ten seconds, and showered it upon her till she looked like a party-confetti bride. Then, because he manifested signs of desiring to drape the wrecked cello about her neck, she returned to the car and drove off

Benedito picked up his dead and staggered away. The crowd melted A policeman, appearing ten minutes later from an adjacent ice cream parlor, picked up an ebon peg and wondered if he should turn it in at the desk.

So ended that little episode.

Benedito was much more of a musician than the lady had said. He was really an excellent performer on his instrument. He was, as the illiterate users of slang would say, red hot. He had a job and was able to get himself a new cello on which he played industriously.

Two years went harmoniously by. Bitterness lingered in the soul of Di Pasquale. Sicilian vengeance, you know.

"Some day," snarled Benedito at least once a week, "some day! She breaks my fiddle; I breaks her neck."

With this tender little sentiment, he carried on.

Well, there is no more violence to be recorded. Benedito never broke her neck—but he nearly broke her heart.

In the two years Benedito rose to the heights of super-sublimity. He became one of the virtuosi. Canada heard about him and practised until the neighbors complained. Yes, Benedito was good.

They engaged him to play a vital obligato for Madame Luca, a soprano then at the critical point in her career, when half of the critics said she was terrible and had chronic sore-throat; and the other two-fourths insisted she was pert, sprightly, ingenue. Benedito was to help her prove that Guil Curci never sang very well.

It was also a big thing for Benedito. To this recital would come all of the greatest of the musical world. It was the biggest thing he had yet been called upon to perform. But Benedito's heart sang a hymn of hate when he gazed upon Madame Luca.

She had forgotten him. He had acquired a new haircut in the meantime, and a grander manner. She met him affably but he, never craving to regret the broken cello, after smiling at her, went away and gnashed his teeth and plotted, plotted

The night of the recital Thousands of musicians and others—Madame Luca would sing first with Benedito di Pasquale playing third or [illegible]

It was subtly yet unmistakably hideous. Here and there Benedito played a little flat when all should have been natural; a bit sharp when the tone was flat; very naturally when things should have been sharp or flat. It sounded worse than Tin Pan Alley. All except the stone-deaf and the [illegible] knew their sarcasm. Madame Luca fell down in the middle of it; but when she should have been standing strong. She was unnerved. She was furious. She turned upon her obligator and reproved the history of his family with artistic temperamental fervor. She refused to go on [illegible] would sing no more that night. Let the papers put the fiasco if they would.

Benedito smiled—a Sicilian smile.

FOXY GRANDPA'S INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

BOBBY and I had been to town and bought his first Norfolk jacket suit, and you know the day on which a boy first gets a regular suit to wear with a shirt and tie is one of the important days of his life. Of course, he wanted to wear it home, and he would have done so except that the sleeves had to be shortened.

It was in the Spring and we were sitting out on the porch for a while before supper. Bobby had been playing "catch" with the boy next door and came back to sit with me while he cooled off. But you know how boys are. He didn't sit still very long, and after a few moments he was out running around the yard throwing the ball up against the wall of the house and catching it as it bounced back at him.

One time he missed it and it fell down amongst some ferns which were growing in a long narrow bed along the side of the house and he had quite a time to find it. Suddenly he stopped and you could almost see the dotted lines from his eyes to the bottom of the flower bed. Then he called me.

"Foxy Grandpa," he said, "come here quickly, there is something very strange going on." I got up from the chair and walked over to where Bobby was down on his hands and knees.

"Look what this toad's doing," he whispered.

I leaned over, and there was a little green toad. He was so busy he didn't even have time to blink at us.

"Foxy Grandpa," gasped Bobby, "do you see that croak right down the back of his skin, and the one right down the middle of his chest?"

"I do," said I, putting on my glasses.

"That just happened this very minute," said Bobby. "Just before you came."

Then we watched. "Look how he's swelling up!" exclaimed Bobby.

And that toad was swelling up, and as he swelled the crack in his skin became wider, and little by little he started to wiggle out of it.

"For pity's sake," said Bobby, "look at him now!" And I had to hold my sides because it did strike me so funny. The little toad pulled each side of his old skin off and pulled his arms and legs out for all the world like a little boy would pull the arms out of his sleeves and the legs out of his trousers.

There he was in his neat new suit—a beautiful dark green, mottled handsomely with cream color, brown and black.

I chuckled and started to go back to the porch, but Bobby called me.

"Look!" was all that Bobby could say, and I don't blame him, because I will tell you what that toad did. He took his old suit of clothes in his front paws—which really looked like hands—rolled them up in a ball and right there before our very eyes put them in his mouth, swallowed them with a big gulp—as if he were taking a pill—blinked at us, gave a croak and hopped off under the ferns.

Bobby and I stood looking at each other, and then burst out laughing. Just then Mary came to the back door and called:

"Foxy Grandpa, here's a package for you to sign."

"My new suit!" shouted Bobby.

We went back to the house, signed for the package, and before you could say Jack Robinson Bobby was trying on his new Norfolk jacket. "I'm glad I don't have to eat my old suit," he laughed as we walked to the mirror in the hall.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS--

By Helen Rowland

VERILY, verily, my Daughter, it is not the duties and the struggles of Matrimony, but its Infinite Privileges, which have transformed it from a Sacrament into a Sacrifice, and caused the Scorners and the Cynics to delight in their mockings.

For, alas, a marriage certificate entitleth its possessor to all the prerogatives of a judge and a censor, and to a life membership in the Critics' Club.

Yea, it affordeth him all the freedom of a spoiled child, and all the claims and authority of a Seller.

It conferreth the privilege of expressing thy secret OPINION of a woman's bad taste in clothes, and of a man's bad judgment in all things.

Of refusing to laugh at a man's jokes, and of scorning to answer a woman's questions.

Of complaining of the dinner, and of turning the table-talk into an argument.

Of letting the "run" go in the stocking, and postponing the day of shaving.

Of yawning visibly, and of swearing above the breath.

Of neglecting the graceful apology, and frankly showing the contempt.

Of eating onions in the salad without thought of kisses, and of growing FAT upon a diet of cream and sugar and potatoes.

Of telling a woman that her perfume is "stifling"—and of telling a man that his conversation is boring.

Of blaming one's temper on a woman's stupidity—and blaming one's headaches on man's cruelty.

Of grabbing the wheel, and calling a woman a "dumbbell"—and of driving from the back seat, and nagging a man "to the verge" of homicide.

Of arousing a man in the middle of the night "to see what the noise is," and of awaking a woman at dawn to find the aspirin!

Of finding a fly in the ointment, a mote in the other's eye, ants in the jelly, and FAULT in everything!

Now, then, shall marriage become a thing of beauty and romance, whilst husbands and wives continue to cling to its "privileges" and to forget all its graces and subtleties and finer obligations?

For, verily, verily, in marriage all the "rules of the game" are unwritten!

And, first of these is "Noblesse oblige!"

COOK-COOS

Did you notice the recent telephoto pictures from London? One showed FIRST PICTURE OF VIOLENCE from British strike and revealed a strike-breaker being STRUCK OVER THE HEAD WITH AN UMBRELLA.

* * *

If the strike hadn't ended we might have had to prepare ourselves for pictures and dispatches as follows:

* * *

LONDON—Violence broke out in Whitechapel district today when striking monocle workers bombarded strike-breakers with chocolate eclaires.

WEEDS-ON-THAMES—First strike violence broke out here today when striking spats cleaners charged a non-union establishment and carried away all fly swatters.

BATH—Riots broke out here last night when striking billiard ball polishers assembled in a mob and put peanut shells in the pockets of strike-breakers.

ANOTHER STRIKE PICTURE FROM LONDON

Evelyn McHorsesradish marries Emerson McHorsesradish as a joke, never dreaming, of course, that he would hold her to it. On the way home from the wedding Emerson is called to the glue factory, where he is employed as a night watchman. Stepping from the street car, Evelyn meets with a mishap, who asks her the time of day. She is struck by his gorgeous motor car and gentlemanly appearance. Now go on with the story—

CHAPTER X.

Evelyn was quite tired after climbing up the fire-escape, as apartment tenants were not permitted to use the elevator after midnight.

"I'll just stop for a moment in the hallway and rest," she thought to herself.

Yawning, she placed one hand, to steady herself, against a nearby door, not dreaming, of course, that it might be unlatched. She was so tired after the day's excitement that she instantly fell asleep on her feet and did not even hear the door open. Nor did she know she had inadvertently fallen.

Other tenants, passing to and fro, could see Evelyn's feet in the hallway, and in fact many laughingly stumbled over them.

Thus it was that—

Final tabulations show that Los Angeles voters piled up an astounding majority in favor of all-night dancing at Venice.

This is probably the worst blow yet dealt the Ford coupe industry.

TRIPP SEES NEW ERA OF HOPE FOR FARMER

By FRANK H. MILSON,
Financial Editor.

General Guy E. Tripp, former president of Hingham and "native" of Wells, Me., now chairman of the board of Westinghouse Electric, sees a new era of hope for the farmer. Help for rural population is coming through decentralization of industry, he declares. He believes industry in the United States is over-centralized.

Guy E. Tripp

General Tripp believes the day of the huge manufacturing plant and the crowded industrial city is passing. He thinks the future will see much of our manufacturing done in small unit plants scattered through the country districts, which would directly in many different ways benefit the farmer.

* * *

Signing by Governor Fuller of the bill authorizing Massachusetts savings banks to invest in the rents of certain public service companies, in addition to those already authorized, has greatly increased the interest in bonds which appear to qualify under the act.

* * *

Millions of dollars' worth of bonds have been sold to the new class now subject to legality. Of course, if it should develop that any of these bonds do not qualify, the investor would be under the necessity of repurchasing the bonds.

* * *

As the new permits savings banks to invest up to 15 per cent. of their deposits in bonds described in the act, and as the deposits at present total about $1,650,000,000, it will be seen that the potential market among the savings banks is some $247,500,000.

* * *

There is great apparent excitement in New York Stock Exchange circles over the false rumor alleged to have been started by bears regarding Hudson Motors, to the effect that only the regular dividend was declared, whereas a 20 per cent. stock dividend was ordered in addition to an increased cash payment. The publication of the facts resulted in an advance of only fractional odd points yesterday. An official Stock Exchange investigation of the "bear" rumor is underway.

* * *

Right here I want to remark that there will probably never be any investigation of the false rumors that resulted in skyrocketing the market to such an extent that many millions were lost when the inevitable slump came.

* * *

Oh, well, investigations usually end in the whitewash pot.

* * *

Statement issued by W. H. Alford, vice-president of the Nash Motor Co., reports that the condition of Charles W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Co., who was operated upon last Friday for appendicitis, is entirely satisfactory to the attending physician. "His pulse and temperature are normal," says Mr. Alford, "and there are no complications. Due to his excellent physical condition, a rapid convalescence is expected."

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

Atlantic City, N. J., May 21.—A once popular song rang "I want to go back, I want to go back, I want to go back to the farm far away from harm." Factories will soon be singing that song. If our electric light and power bulders' dreams and plans materialize.

"Take the factory back to the farm," is their new slogan.

Never before was there such a demand for America's electric giants, Edison, General Electric, Sidney Z. Mitchell, General Guy E. Tripp, Owen D. Young, Gerard Swope, Creed, Henry L. Doherty, H. M. Byllesby, Arthur S. Miller, M. S. Sloan, C. F. O'Brien, Alex Dow, Gerard Swope, J. E. Dawley, Walter S. Gifford, Samuel Insull, Arthur Atwater, George Breed, B. C. Forbes, Martin Insull, W. S. Barstow, Louis A. Ellis, Charles A. Munroe, Edgar W. W. Freeman, G. E. Gossler, C. Scott Ashmun, Frank Gow, Edgar M. Tait—these are some of the assistants taking part in the greatest electrical Light Association convention ever held.

A unique exhibition of the latest electric wonders forms part of the convention program. Electricity is alike to the housewife and the industrialist.

Let me try to report to you some of the significant facts, speeches, etc.

* * *

Fully 236,000 customers were contributing to the stockholders last year, bringing the total to 1,133,410—it is now a million and a quarter.

There are now 226 light and power companies selling securities direct to the public.

Customers have supplied over a billion new capital to these companies serving 75,000 population.

United States homes and industry as a whole are using 50 per cent. electrified.

Instead of cheap imported bulbs they consume more current. More than 90 per cent. of us have defective eyes.

Timber for electric light poles is becoming scarce here and in Canada.

Last year 97 new hydro plants were put into operation. Other reports, giving the United States a total of 22,022,000 kilowatts, figure of electric power produced from water power sources and 63,000,000 kilowatts from steam plants. No other nation can approach this. Soon the newspapers will be telling us that our farms have electric service and not two acres of our railroads in every hundred are electrified. We've got a long way to go.

Read from Edwin J. Foster, of the Commonwealth Edison, Chicago—"Roughly, three fourths of the customers of our company are 50 per cent. of the output is now supplied through the systems that were owned by over one hundred different interests and that are interconnected to a greater or less extent, and which have the advantages of continuous 24 hour service and more reliable service than otherwise could be possible. The remaining small portion of the business is divided between municipal plants and private local plants."

The next great opportunities for super power development, he suggested, are in the Tennessee waterway, the Tennessee River and its tributaries, the Columbia River basin, and along the Colorado River.

Although the industry's founder, Thomas A. Edison, is still very much alive, pension plans for electric employees are rapidly being installed.

* * *

Heavyweight speeches will have to wait.

Self-Help the Best Help

Congress Should Take Time to Make a REAL Contribution to Farm Relief

The country's better judgment will commend the taking of enough time at Washington to make a real contribution to farm relief.

For reasons completely clear, relief is imperative. It is as necessary for the cities as for the country. Those who produce our food must be fairly paid. The task of getting their business arranged so that it will prosper is not their's alone, but a common obligation.

Yet it calls to them to assume the bulk alike of the effort and the risk. There is no promise of permanency in any system of political price-fixing or subsidy.

To contend that farmers are too scattered, too individualistic or too lacking in initiative to take heed of the trend in other industries and stop wasteful competition by joining in large units to develop more business-like methods is an indictment we refuse to draw.

The fact that our farmers last year through co-operative organizations did a business of twenty-five hundred million dollars refutes it. Much of this business was as well done as any other business. It can be better done when rural co-operative effort is more widely spread, better organized and more experienced.

That is why we think that the bill in Congress which best opens the way to intelligent self help on American farms is the one which creates a National Farm Marketing Association and offers a government loan to start it off.

It frees rural co-operative effort from legal restrictions which have hitherto operated as handicaps.

It permits, encourages and co-ordinates the organizing of co-operative effort by zones.

It leads to voluntary regulation of production so that there shall be diminished peril of alternate gluts and famines.

Apart from these things and apart from its friendly initial loan, it leaves the intelligent farmers of the nation free to work out their own salvation by experiment in business methods which have been vindicated in other industries.

That is a challenge, but not an unfriendly or an unsympathetic challenge to the sourcefulness of farmers themselves.

Should they rise to it, as we believe they can and will, it will rid them of the humiliation of having to ask in future for any kind of political help suggestive of alms or doles.

The Congress will be wise to approach this urgent problem with a longer view than to the next election. It should lay a foundation which will endure.

The Spirit of '76

Still on Top in Its Old Homes

Thousands upon thousands of New Englanders will visit Philadelphia this Summer to see what the City of Brotherly Love has to offer by way of commemorating the sesqui-centennial of the Declaration of Independence.

It will be a trip worth taking, whether you travel by motorcar or on one of the cut-rate excursions which our rejuvenated New England railroad companies have adopted from amongst the happier customs of the past.

But there is not going to be any shortage of celebrations in New England this Summer, and it is well to have these in mind, too.

The Provincial Congress of New Hampshire, meeting at Exeter on January 6th, 1776, renounced British rule by setting up an administration answerable only to the people of the Province and naming Matthew Thornton "President." New Hampshire will honor this event at Concord, the capital, on May 30th and June 1st and 2nd.

Our own Marblehead will celebrate, on June 16th, 18th and 19th, the 150th anniversary of the birth of the American Navy. The battleships Utah, New York and Wyoming and a fleet of destroyers will be in the harbor. Ringling Brothers' circus will be in town. Be sure to visit Abbot Hall, when you visit Marblehead, and let the children see the Willard painting, famous and much copied, "The Spirit of '76."

Kingston, which dates back to Plymouth Rock, will observe next month the two hundredth anniversary of its incorporation as a town. A number of the leaders of Plymouth Colony settled in Kingston, among them Governor William Bradford. Major-General John Thomas, who commanded the troops occupying Dorchester Heights, compelling the British evacuation of Boston on St. Patrick's Day in '76, was a Kingston physician. The Kingston celebration will begin on Friday, June 26th.

Providence, which does everything well, is planning such a Fourth of July celebration as the city has not witnessed "in many a long day." Other Fourth of July observances of importance are scheduled by Portland and Newburyport. On the Fourth, too, will begin Salem's week-long observance of the city's three hundredth anniversary of the city's founding.

The observant young New Englander will learn a lot of history right here at home this Summer and be a better American for it. And he will have a whale of a lot of fun, the while he is learning.

More Monkey Fight

A Study in Heredity

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., son of a father who knows more about evolution now than he did a little while ago, perhaps will take his father's place in the famous Tennessee "monkey trial."

Professor Scopes, who allowed his students to know about the doctrine of evolution, has appealed his case. Public authorities in Tennessee, believing that the way to keep its young people pure is to keep them ignorant, will fight the case over again.

Mr. Bryan, Jr., will defend proud man from vile suggestion that some of his ancestors lived in trees.

It will afford an interesting study in heredity, which is more important than the monkey trial. If young Mr. Bryan could exonerate our ancestors from crimes of all sorts, from cannibalism to slavery, he would do more for our respectability than wiping [illegible] dreadful "monkey stain."

HOPES CENTERED IN SON OF THE HOUSE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHEN a man reaches a certain stage in life he plans and works for his son, and his hopes are centred in his son quite as much as in his own career.

Attention has recently been called to the President of the United States as a son, by the loss of his father.

The elderly Mr. Coolidge had the satisfaction of seeing his son elected to the highest office in the gift of the people and of himself visiting the place where Lincoln and Grant used to live. As far as can be gathered the old man's last days were cheered by the knowledge that his son had made good and were not shadowed by any disappointment in him.

There are few pleasures that appeal to age more than the pleasure of seeing one's son successful.

It is the tragedy of life frequently that one's children become alienated and the filial tie that binds father and son is weakened. The sense of loyalty to one's parents is not so strong usually in the United States as it is in older countries, particularly the Orient. There the parental affection is the outstanding emotion, just as in our civilization the love of a man for his wife is supreme.

It is hoped that this article may be read by some son who has never been a comfort to his parents. If so he ought to be shocked into a realization of his standing by the example of the nation's chief.

To keep the understanding perfect between father and son is often difficult, and those sons who are able to retain the affection of their parents as well as their trust and pride are to be congratulated.

Of course some parents are impossible, and also some children are likewise. But it is a serious question that everyone ought to ask himself whether he has done his utmost to conserve this important connection.

In all climes and ages veneration for and respect for parents have been a part of recognized morality. The injunction to respect one's parents is included in the Ten Commandments and is a cardinal element in the belief of the East.

Unless a parent is frankly deficient and notoriously unjust, it must always be a source of remorse to a child that he has not preserved his respect.

(Copyright, 1926, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

WHEN YOU LET YOUR RAGE OVERCOME GOOD SENSE

"Won't you please write something which will cause people with bad tempers to control themselves?" writes a woman. "A few years ago I came near shooting my husband, while angry, and I have shuddered ever since."

Persons who have little or no control under great provocation should be very watchful and not let themselves get into that condition.

Maybe you have fits of anger when thoughts of consequences are banished for the time.

Your only thought is to inflict injury to hurt the one who has aroused the demon of anger.

Your fury at such times calls loudly for a weapon and if you could find one the chances are that you would use it.

That you are not a murderer is due principally to the fact that you were not able to lay hands on some dangerous weapon till after your anger cooled.

Then you can thank God that He has given you more time in this world to school yourself in self-control.

Knowing that you are liable to lose your reason under pressure of annoyance or provocation, avoid those who set these forces loose. If, however, you must endure their presence or their taunts set your mind to let their shafts fall unnoticed by you. It pays to keep yourself in check.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

LITTLE Martha Ewing will skip another grade this year.

This is the third grade which Martha has skipped in her brief life. If her present progress continues she will be ready for the university at fifteen, some three years ahead of the average scholar.

Mama Ewing is tremendously proud of Martha's "success." She wants me to tell all the world about it, as a proof of what can be done with a child if a Mama really sets her mind to the job.

Mama Ewing set her mind to this job when Martha was about sixty minutes old. She has always been quite sure that her baby would be a genius—now she merely needed to prove it. The proof seemed easy, for from the first little Martha did her stuff with marked brilliancy. Her greedy little mind lapped up information like a vacuum cleaner laps up lint.

Moreover, she seemed to have none of the distressing handicaps of the ordinary, crude young human. She didn't have dopy, stupid spells. She didn't fly into tantrums. She wasn't lazy and careless or impertinent or clumsy. She was, from the first, The Model Child, and Mama Ewing never let anyone forget it.

But surely such rapid mental progress must have affected her health.

No, indeed. Martha's health was managed as cleverly as her intelligence. She had regular periods for play during which she bounced and beamed with 100 p. c. efficiency. Martha at twelve is as plump and shiny and full of vim as a nice, new coin.

No Record Set

So naturally Mama Ewing thinks she has made a record.

I don't.

I think that little girls who skip three grades before they are twelve and get degrees at eighteen are tragic. Moreover, I don't think they'll be worth their salt as future citizens.

Humans need to grow before they amount to anything.

Growth doesn't mean learning facts.

Growth means going through the normal experiences of human development.

Growth means being lazy—being careless—being clumsy and forgetful and foolish and stupid. All these phases have a deep significance in human life. They are not only the program by which the human body builds and adjusts itself to its physical and mental ripening—they are also the processes by which the human soul builds and adjusts itself to its place in human society.

They make for the real wisdom and understanding.

They make for tolerance.

The end of all education is to make men understand men. You may understand mathematics and geography and grammar and civics and spelling and history and a score of other subjects, but if you don't also understand laziness and carelessness, clumsiness, shyness, forgetfulness, foolishness and stupidity, you're a numbskull.

Brain Polished

Little Martha will never understand these things, because she has never been allowed to be these things. Her brain always has been brightly polished and her nose neatly wiped. She has never been allowed to be an ordinary, aggravating, dirty little human youngster.

Look at the ranks of the child geniuses and you will find that this is true.

Life isn't lived by skipping grades.

Human power doesn't arise from knowing things.

It's infinitely more important to know that you don't know things, and to be tolerant with the other chap because he doesn't know them, either.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

OH, we are the folk of the Dreamers' Clan, we treasure no lands or gold, and our thoughts are strange to a worldly man for our spirits can never grow old. We have found no lure in the search of fame, no joy in the quest of pride, but our hearts bow days at the dawn's swift flame and when stars on the zenith ride! We are moved by the magic of little things like the song of a child at play, the gleam of the sun on a red bird's wings or the foam of the grey waves' spray. Oh, the folk of the Dreamers' Clan are we, and ragged and poor we go, but ours is the Dream and its ecstasy, ours the joy which no others know.

Wish You Were in Dixie!

A Not Unreasonable Wish, If You Happen to Be Waiting for New England Mill to "Go on Full Time," Again

Melville Chater, who recently completed an automobile tour of North Carolina with his eyes wide open, draws a picture of conditions in the cotton mill centres which will be studied with interest in Lowell, Fall River, Manchester and New Bedford:

"An hour's ride beyond Charlotte we entered Gastonia, one of the largest textile centres in the United States. Of its 20,000 people, about three-fourths are working in forty-two mills whose tall stacks cut the sky. Yet, in the town's broad, tree-shaded streets, lined with neat cottages on well-kept, flower-fringed plots, one felt no oppressive sense of concentrated industry, but rather the restfulness of some model suburb, widespread to sun, air and surrounding countryside."

How about living conditions? How do the workers "get along"? Mr. Chater tells us something about that:

"With mill workers' cottages rentable at $3 a month, with water and electric light FREE, and a mild climate, necessitating LITTLE FUEL, which is OBTAINABLE AT COST, it is not uncommon for mountain families to work at Gastonia long enough to pay off their farm mortgage and then return to the Blue Ridge."

Mr. Albert L. Scott, of Lockwood Greene & Co., Inc., adds the information that Southern mill owners provide their workers with ice and other necessities, at cost. In the mill villages the laborers are provided with houses, gardens and, in many cases, a cow.

Present Southern success in the cotton textile industry Mr. Scott attributes to "moderate capitalization, economy of production, accessibility to raw materials, and cheapness of labor."

Trouble With "Cooling Off" as War Cure

By James A. Reed

THE so-called World Court has been advocated as a "cooling off place." This presupposes that nations go to war like two men with their fists, on the spur of the moment. Not a single war in history began that way.

Nations go to war over great questions that they have thought of for years. There may be a spark that lights the powder magazine, the spark may be small, but they have been gathering that powder for years and for a purpose. The man who does not know that does not know much of anything.

Take the last war. Does anyone suppose anybody acted there without knowing what he was doing? About two hundred years ago the King of Prussia began forming the nucleus of the Prussian army to carry out a policy of enlargement.

Out of that policy grew Prussia and from Prussia sprang the great German Empire. The German Empire drilled her men; she opened her schools to study every art of war. Chemists were busy night and day devising instrumentalities of destruction.

AND England? Was she not acting with full knowledge of those policies? Years before the war she made an offensive and defensive alliance against Germany. She made it secretly. Two or three years before the war began the minister of the navy prepared for it. He had placed sixteen-inch guns on vessels that once were armed with twelve and fourteen-inch guns and for a year before war was declared the British navy was mobilized at the point of vantage and practically stripped for action so that it could move upon a few hours' notice.

France was enforcing her universal draft; France was training every one of her gallant sons to be ready for the day; France had the numbers of the automobiles, and knew where she could instantly call them in order to rush her troops to the front.

PRO-COURTERS talk about "a place to cool off," as though somebody had sat beside a hot stove and got into a sweat and needed to open a window. It is part of the tommyrot that has been fed to our people—absolute, sheer drivel. The place for nations to cool off is in their council chambers before they get ready to gather the implements of war. The way for nations to cool off is for them to cultivate the spirit of decency and quit the policy of robbery.

Practically every war of modern times can be traced to one thing—the insatiate desire of nations for territory; the, ruthless willingness to invade the homelands of other people and to take that which others possess. That desire is as rife today as it was in the days of Nebuchadnezzar, of Rameses, of Alexander the Great, of Cambyses, of Xerxes, of Darius, of Attila and of all the other monsters who have cursed God's footstool. It is part of the modern fabric [illegible]
